TRAIN-WRECKERS' WORK

PARTLY DERAILED.

Track at Ravensworth, Va.—Only the Baggage-master Injured. Miscreants Fire on the Flagman.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.-The Chesapeake and Ohio express, bound from Washington to Cincinnati, was thrown from a side-track at Ravensworth, Va., eighteen miles below Washington, at 12:19 o'clock this morning by trainneckers. The engine, mail car, express car and one truck of the combined baggage and smoker were derailed. The only person injured was Baggagemaster E. S. Coffman, whose back was hurt by being thrown from a chair.

The rails had been tampered with just beyond the curve, which prevented the wreckers' work being seen until the train was close onto the spur tracks. Engineer Fowler applied the brakes and succeeded in stopping the train only after the engine traveled on the ties almost one hundred feet. The switch lamp had been removed, the switch lock broken and the switch thrown for the sidetrack. The wreckers waited near the track, and as the flagman went back to protect the train a bullet sped by his head, but missed its mark

The Oceanica was loaded with coal from Buffalo to Chicago. The Chisholm was loaded with iron ore bound from Marquette to Ohloports. The crews took to the riggings and were rescued. The Oceanica was valued at $80,000, and the Chisholm at $125,000. The boats lie in seventeen meet of water. It is thought the accident was caused by a confusion of signals or lights.

COLUMBUS (O.,) Aug. 15 .- The Republican campaign in Ohio was for-mally opened today by two monster meetings in this city. The orators were Senator John Sherman, Senator-elect J. B. Foraker of Ohio, and Hon. Stewart L. Woodford of Brooklyn, N. Y. art L. Woodford of Brooklyn, N. Y. The meetings were held in an immense tent on East Broad street, the city having no auditorium large enough to accommodate the crowds. When Gov. Bushnell introduced Sen ator John Sherman, the venerable statesman advanced to the front of the stage amid loud applause, and a band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner." Senator Sherman stood calmly surveying the crowd until the band ceased playing. THE ADDRESS.

A Valuable Addition to the Arguments Against Cheap Metal.

Mr. Chairman and Fellow-Citizens: Mr. Chairman and Fellow-Citizens:
A citizen of Ohio has been selected by the Republican National Convention as their candidate for President of the United States, and we are here to ratify and support his nomination. We take pride in William McKinley, not only for the honor conferred upon Ohio by the convention, but because we know him to be fitted for that great office. We know that since his boyhood his life has been pure and stainless, that as a soldier in the Union army he was brave and loyal, that as a member of Congress for many years he exhibited the highest mental traits and rendered great service to his country, and that as Governor of Ohio he proved his capacity to perform difficult executive duties. And he has the higher claim upon us that, during all his life, he has been a faithful and able Republican, thoroughly in sympathy with the principles of the Republican party. That party does not rest its claim to your confidence merely upon the merits of its candidates, but upon the soundness of its public policy, its measures and its aims.

QUESTIONS TO BE DECIDED. A citizen of Ohio has been selected by ley, its measures and its aims.

QUESTIONS TO BE DECIDED.

It is the distinguishing feature of our Republican form of government that every question affecting the people of the United States must uitimately be determined by them at the ballot-box. Every legal voter has an equal voice in deciding it, however difficult the problem may be. It so happens at the coming Presidential election there will be submitted to your judgment two such questions, one of which is whether any holder of silver bullion may deposit it at the mints of the United States and have it coined for his benefit, and without cost to him, into silver dollars, each of the weight of 412.50 grains of standard silver, nine-tenths fine, and may tender them for any debt, public or private. The other question is whether in levying duties or taxes on imported goods we shall only consider the revenue required, or whether, while raising the needed revenue, we shall seek also to protect and encourage domestic industries; the one is called revenue tariff and the other a protective tariff, and the other a protective tariff and the other a protective tariff and the other and a protective tariff and the other and tariff are vital questions of domestic policy of equal importance, but I propose on this occasion to confine my remarks mainly to what is known as the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 parts of silver to 1 part of gold. This issue is thrust upon us by the Democratio party, or rather by the Populist branch QUESTIONS TO BE DECIDED.

THE SAME OLD POPULISTIC WOLF.

FABLE: A wolf who had been vainly trying to secure one of a flock of sheep at last seized the opportunity when the shepherd and his dog were asleep to disguise himself in the former's clothing. Hoping to lure them within his reach, he tried to imitate the shepherd's voice, but he opened his mouth he betrayed himself to the guardians of the Democratic party. Gold and silver coined are recognized by all commercial nations of the world as the best standards of value, as the measure of every article of desire, of everything that is bought or sold. These two metals not only measure all things, but they measure each other. Their relative value constantly changes. of silver were worth more than one ounce of gold. Now thirty-one ounces of silver can be bought for one ounce

BEYOND LEGISLATION.
This fluctuation of value cannot be prevented by law. It is beyond the reach of legislation. It is caused by the changing demands for and the increasing supply of these metals from the mines. Both are necessary as money, silver to supply the daily wants of life, and gold to measure the larger transactions of business, especially in exchanges with foreign nations, how to maintain the parity of the two metals at a fixed ratio has been, is, and always will be, a difficult problem, not only in the United States, but in the civilized world.

THE ISSUE REVIEWED.

THE ISSUE REVIEWED. It was one of the first questions to occupy the attention of the American statesmen after the adoption of the Constitution, and is now one of the most pressing after more than one hundred vears of national growth. In 1792 silver and gold were made the common standards of value in the United States, at the ratio of 15 to 1, but this was because that then the actual market value of fifteen ounces of silver was equal to the actual market value of one ounce of gold. The greatest care was taken to ascertain this ratio by Thomas Jefferson, then Secretary of State, and Alexander Hamilton, then Secretary of the Treasury. These two distinguished statesmen who disagreed upon nearly all other questions, did agree upon the then relative value of the two metals, and that both should be coined into money at that ratio. years of national growth. In 1792 silver metals, and that both should be coined into money at that ratio.

At the time neither gold nor silver was found in any considerable quantities in the thirteen States then forming the Union. The revolutionary war had been conducted with paper money which became worthless, and the coins of Spain. England and other countries, had been made a legal-tender and continued. tinued so for many years after the adoption of the Constitution.

adoption of the Constitution.

When the new American coins were issued it was found that the abraided and worthless coins of other countries filled the channels of circulation and the new and bright dollars of the United States were exported. This led to the discontinuance in 1806 by President Jefferson of the coinage of the silver dollars and after that date none were coined for more than thirty years. This order of Jefferson, I suppose, would be called by our Populistic friends "the crime of 1806." In the mean time France and other countries adopted the ratio of 15½ ounces of silver as the equivalent of 1 of gold. To avoid those embarrassing changes, England, in 1816, adopted gold as the single standard in that country and silver as subidiary coins.

RATIO OF 16 TO 1.

In 1834, during the administration President Jackson, and under the lead-ership of Daniel Webster and Thomas H. Benton, Congress adopted the ratio of sixteen of silver to one of gold by re-

H. Benton, Congress adopted the ratio of sixteen of silver to one of gold by reducing the number of grains in the gold coin. As silver was thus slightly undervalued, it was not largely coined.

Silver could be coined in France at the ratio of 15 to 1, and the owner of silver builton could send it to France and have it converted into coin at that ratio, thus receiving about 3 per cent. more for his builton than if coined at the American ratio of 16 to 1. Gold became the only American coin in circulation, and the law of 1834 was to make gold the standard. This was declared by the committee of the House of Representatives, who had charge of the bill, who said in their report: "The committee think that the desideratum in the monetary system is a standard of uniform value. They cannot ascertain that both metals have ever circulated simultaneously, concurrently and indicriminately in any country where there are banks or money-dealers, and they entertain the conviction that the nearest approach to an invariable standard is its establishment in one metal, which metal shall compose exclusively the currency for large payments."

This law, heartily approved by An-

PAST "CRIMES." PAST "CRIMES."

This law, heartily approved by Andrew Jackson, would now be called "the crime of 1834." In 1853, upon the report of Senator Hunter, when Pierce was President and when all branches of the government were under Democratic control, Congress reduced the quantity of silver in the fractional coins (half-dimes, dimes, quarters and half-dollars) more than 6 per cent, directed the purchase of the silver for their free coinage and made them a legal-tender for 35 only, leaving gold still practically the only full legal-tender United States coin. At this time the silver dollar had disappeared from the current coins of the United States, and was actually and purposely demonetized.

The purpose of this act is the purpose stated by the chairman of the committee having the bill in charge in the House of Representatives: "We propose, so far as these coins are concerned, to make silver subservient to the gold coin of the country. We intend to do what the best writers on political economy have approved; what experience, where the experiment has been tried, has demonstrated to be the best, and what the committee believes to be necessary and proper—to make but one standard currency and to make all others subservient to it. We mean to make gold the standard coin." This, I suppose, would now be called "the erime of 1853." Silver was practically demonetized by this act, and the act of 1834. It is certain that from 1801, when reference to silver and all forms of paper money. As I have stready stated, Mr. Jefferson in 1866 suspended the colnage of silver dollars, and it remained suspended for more than thirty years. The act of Congress of 1831 established gold as practically the only coin in circulation. Gold coins were then "gold bugs." Senator Hunter, in 1853, during Pierce's administration, secured the passage of a law which reduced the silver in the half dimes, dimes, quarters and half dollars, making them subsidiary coins, abolished their free coinage and limited their legal-tender to $5. The silver dollars were not mentioned and practically excluded from coinage or circulation, yet now the Democratic barty upon the demand of the Populist party and when silver has fallen in market value to nearly one-half its former value, seeks to demonetize gold and to establish silver as the sole standard of value.

When the Republican party came into power in 1861 by the election of Mr. Lincoln, it had to face a formidable rebellion. Gold and silver alike were banished from circulation and irredeemable paper money of all denominations from 10 cents to $10,000 was substituted in place of coin ticable. In March, 1859, it pledged the faith of the nation to payment in coin or its equivalent of all bonds of the United States and to redeem the United

"CRIME OF "73."

In order to cary out this pledge, it became necessary to revise the various coinage laws of the United States. This was promptly and very carefully done by a bill framed in the Treasury De-partment while Mr. Boutwell was secretary. It was thoroughly considered by a bill framed in the Treasury Department while Mr. Boutwell was secretary. It was thoroughly considered by the experts of that department, and was printed and submitted to all persons in the United States who were supposed to be familiar with the coinage laws. The bill containing sixty-seven sections, accompanied by a mass of information that fills a volume, was sent to Congress on April 25, 1870, by Secretary Boutwell and its passage was strongly recommended by him.

This bill omitted from the coins of the United States the silver dollar, precisely as was done in 1853, but provided for the coinage of the fractional qurts of the dollar in accordance with the act of that year. This bill was pending in Congress for three years, was carefully considered in both houses and special attention was called to the omission of the 12.5-grain silver-dollar which was never in the bill at any stage, and the reasons for this omission were given. It was finally determined at the urgent request of members from the Pacific Coast to insert among the silver coins a trade dollar containing 420 grains of standard silver, but this dollar was made like the minor coins, a legal-tender for $50 only. There was but one yea and nay vote on the bill, and that one was on the proposition to repeal the charge made by the mint for the coinage of gold. I voted against its repeal. The oill passed both houses and became a law on February 12, 1873, by practically a unanimous vote of both parties and was specially supported and voted for by the Senators and members from the silver States.

This has been called the "crime of 1873," and as the bill was under my charge in the Senate, I was held to be the chief criminal. It was, in fact, a wise measure of public policy, carefully discussed and considered during three years.

When the test of the outery against this act is compared with the sober acts shown by official records, it appears simply ludicrous. The total number of standard silver dollars issued under the Coinage Act of 1873 containing seve was 420.790.041, or fifty-four times the number issued before 1873. It is strange that the very men who supported and urged the coinage law of 1873 and demanded the exclusive coinage of gold are the very men who now demand the free coinage of silver and denounce as "goldites" and "robbers" all those who believe in the coinage of both gold and silver.

A FALSE CHARGE.

A FALSE CHARGE

A FALSE CHARGE.

It has been said that the dropping of the silver doilar in the coinage act of 1873 was surreptitiously done. This charge is shown to be false by the debate in Congress, and especially by the declarations of the men who now make the charge. Sixteen months after the passage of that act, Senator Jones of Nevada, in debate in the Senate June 11, 1874, said: I am opposed to any proposition, come in whatever form it may, that attempts to override what God himself has made for money. I believe the sooner we come down to a purely gold standard the better it will be for the country."

April 1, 1874, he said: "Does this Congress mean now to leave entirely out of view and discard forever a standard of value? And what but gold can be that standard? What other thing on earth possesses the requisite qualities? Gold is the articulation of commerce. It is the most potent agent of civilization. It is gold that has lifted the nations from barbarism.

"It is the common denominator of values. It makes possible the classification of labor and the interchange of commodities. Gold has intervened in bargains made between men since the dawn of civilization, and it has never failed to faithfully fulfill its part as the universal agent and servant of mankind. The value of gold is not affected by the stamp of the government."

Senator Stewart of Nevada, on the same subject on June 12, 1874, said:

"Sir, the laboring man and the producer is entitled to have his product and his labor measured by the same standard, give him money as you require from the producer, you require from the laboring man gold to pay the interest on your national debt, which is right, which cannot be avoided, if you mean to save this national honor; then give him the same money with which to pay that debt.

"The question will never be settled until you determine the simple question whether the laboring man is entitled to the simple question whether the laboring man is entitled ton the simple question whether the laboring man is entitled the controlle It has been said that the dropping of the silver dollar in the coinage act to save this national honor; then give him the same money with which to pay that debt.

"The question will never be settled until you determine the simple question whether the laboring man is entitled to have a gold dollar if he earns it, or whether you are going to cheat him with something else. That is the upshot of the whole thing. Everybody has to say that the laboring man was entitled to a good dollar. That was fought over. They will fight it over again and the same party will win. There have been a great many battles fought against gold, but gold has won every time. Gold has never compromised. Gold has made the world respect it all the time. The English people thought they could get along without gold for awhile, but they had to come back to it."

On June 1, 1874, Senator Jones and Senator Stewart and all the Representatives and Senators of the silver States were urgent and honest in saying that gold was best standard of value, but they we ged their minds when the largely-inc. sed production of silver in Nevada and other States reduced the market value of silver below that of gold at the established ratio of 16 to 1. They then wanted a market for their silver. They wanted to pay existing debts and obligations contracted upon the gold basis in silver, but took care in their contracts to stipulate for the payment of gold in them, and this has been and is now the general practice in the silver States.

ON A DISCOUNT BASIS.

the Pacific Coast conducted their business upon the basis of greenbacks or United States notes, then at a discount of about 13 per cent. Neither silver nor gold was used in domestic transactions, but we collected our customs duties in gold coin and conducted our foreign commerce in gold, the money of the world. It was not until January, 1876, that the first step was taken to resume specie payments, nor did we resume until January, 1879.

During this period silver rapidly fell in market value below gold at the ratio of 16 to 1. Prior and subsequent to 1873, many changes were made in coinage by the leading countries of the world. Germany, in 1871, changed its standard from silver to gold France Italy from silver to gold. France, Italy, Switzerland and Belgium had in 1865 entered into a treaty called the Latin Union, to which others became parties and by which the coin of each of th and by which the coin of each of these countries were received and paid by all of them. This important arrangement was first modified and finally abandoned and gold became the standard of values of those countries, but in all sliver was coined and largely used as a subsidiary coin, precisely as in the United States.

THE RESUMPTION ACT.

In anticipation of the resumption of specie payments, the Resumption Act In anticipation of the resumption of specie payments, the Resumption of the 18 provided silver coins of dimes, quarters and half-dollars for the resumption of the fractional currency then in general use in our country. These new silver coins gave great satisfaction. They were limited in legal tender qualities to $10. At this time Mr. Bland of Missouri introduced his bill for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, on the demand of the holders of silver bullion, liver had then declined below that ratio. One ounce of gold was worth more than sixteen ounces of silver. The Bland Bill, if a it had become a law, as it passed the House, would have demonetized gold. Such was not the purpose of Congress.

When the bill came to the Senate, an amendment was made, on the motion of Senator Allison, which changed the scope of the bill and authorized and directed the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase from time to time silver bullion at the market price not less than $2,000,000, or more than $4,000,000 worth per month, and cause the same to be coined into silver dollars as fast as purchased. It also provideed that any holder of the coin authorized by that act might deposit the same with the Treasurer of the United States in sums not less than $10 and receive coin in certificates thereof, of not less than $10 each and that the coin deposited should be retained in the Treasury for the payment of certificates on demand.

BLAND-ALLISON ACT.

BLAND-ALLISON ACT.

This bill, so amended, passed both houses. It was known as the Bland-Allison Act. It greatly added to the difficulties of redemption, and for that reason was vetoed by President Hayes, but became a law over his veto. Under its provisions the United States purchased over 291,000,000 ounces of silver at the cost of $308,379,200. It was hoped that this enormous purchase would arrest the decline of silver, but in spite of it silver steadily declined in market value, and at the present price the loss to the government on the purchase of silver under this and amounts to over $100,000,000.

When Congress met in December, BLAND-ALLISON ACT.

"Hon John Sherman, Mansfield, O.—
Sir: I have the honor to state, in reply to your letter of the 15th inst., that the aggregate amount and cost of silver bullion purchased under the acts of February 28, 1878, and July 14, 1890, was as follows:

SILVER'AS THE SOLE STANDARD.

But we are now brought face to face with a proposition which, if agreed to, will make silver the sole standard of with a proposition which, if agreed to, will make silver the sole standard of value for all debts and credits, for the wages of labor, and the purchase and sale of, property. The Democratic party, rat its freeent convention at Chicago, adopted a resolution in favor of the free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen parts of silver to one of gold. We know that in the United States and in all countries in the world thirty owness or more of silver can be purchased by one ownes of silver can be purchased by one owness sold. With the free coinage of silver, gold will be demonetized. Nothing can be more certain than the chaper money only will circulate. The United States has thus far maintained its silver coins at parity with gold coins only by its exclusive monopoly of coinage and by limiting the amount, but with free coinage of silver there could be no limitation, filiver builton in every form will be pressed upon the mints, and with the maintaiory duty of free coinage, where the maintain of the gold dollar will be harded, or will be quoted and sold as a commodity at about 194 cents of the silver coin. Silver will stand as the par of galle, and sold will be cuoted at its commercial value.

Let us contemplate for awhile the inevitable, peault of the free coinage of silver even if I Tepeat what I say. It would violate every contract for the payment of money made since January 1, 1879. The Resumption Act, which went into operation on that day, provided for the payment in coin on demand of all United States notes presented for redemptions All forms of money whether of silver or gold, or paper, were then maintained at par with each other and have been so main.

And here, fellow-citizens, we ought to stand. I appeal to Democrats and Republicans alike We are all interested in having a sound and stable currency, founded upon gold and silly ver. We cannot by law fix the value of either metal or coin or of any of the articles that enter into the wants of life.

The great law of supply and demand affects the value, as it does iron, copper or zinc. All have fallen in market value by means of new discoveries and improved methods of production. I have here a statement of the Director of the Mint, dated July 21, 1895, showing the amount and cost of silver bullion purchased **underake* acts.of* 1878* and 1890, and its value at the present market price, showing a shrinkage of over $145.000,000.

"Hon John Sherman, Mansfield, O.—Sir: I have the honor to state, in reply to your letter of the 15th inst., that the aggregate amount and cost of silver bullion purchased under the acts of February 28, 1878, and July 14, 1890, was as follows:

Cost

EFFECT ON WORKINGMEN. But by far the greatest injury result shown that the United States can make the silver dollar buy as much as the gold dollar, but it can only be done by the government buying silver bullion as needed and coining it into dollars on government account. This has been tried. Every country in Europe, except possibly Russia, republics and monarchies, maintains the gold standard and silver coins at parity with gold at even a less ratio than the United States, and now Russia has hoarded over $400,000 of gold in preparation for the gold standard which she will adopt. We have now in the treasury belonging to the government over three hundred and seventy-nine million silver dollars represented by certificates, and also silver bullion costing over $118,000,000 in treasury notes, in active circulation and maintained at par with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1.

OPEN TO THE WORLD.

OPEN TO THE WORLD.

The free coinage of silver is an invitation, not only to American miners but to all miners or holders of silver in the world to deposit their silver in 'the mints of the United States and to receive in exchange therefor a silver dollar for every 412½ grains of standard silver deposited. But that silver is worth in the market only 52 cents. Why should we receive this buillon from the owners of silver mines at nearly double its market value, when we have such a vast hoard in the treasury which we hold with difficulty at par with gold? The only object and effect of this measure will be to degrade the dollar, to lessen its purchasing power nearly one-half, to enable debtors to pay their debts at 53 cents for a dollar and to cheat the public creditors who hold our bonds. If this policy should be adopted, the United States will take its place among the nations of the earth as a bankrupt, closing its business at 53 cents on the dollar.

ANOTHER ELEMENT OF MEAN-OPEN TO THE WORLD.

ANOTHER ELEMENT OF MEAN

NESS.
There is another element of mean There is another element of meanness in this free coinage of silver. The United States has always paid its bonds in gold coin or its equivalent. In the darkest heurs of the civil war we stipulated to pay our bonds, principal and interest, in gold or its equivalent. All of the war debt has been paid in this way. A fortion of it was paid by the sale of bonds bearing a lower rate of interest, but we exacted from the purchasers of these bonds gold coin or its equivalent, even while our notes were below par in coin. About $847, 600,000 of these securities are now outstanding, of which $262,000,000 was sold by this administration and paid for in gold coin. It is one of the objects of those who advocate the free coinage of silver to force the government to pay these bonds in silver coin reduced in value. It is harsh

Now, fellow-citizens, I have said all I desire to say at present on the free coinage of silver. I have the confident hope that the great body of the Republicans and Democrats, representing the conservative element of our people, will stamp their rebuke upon this measure of infamy and thus preserve intact the honor, the credit and glory of our great country. This matter of the free coinage of silver and the degredation of the standard of value involves not only questions of money, but of honor and good faith. When their honor is involved, the people never fail to respond. They have compiled with every promise and paid every debt contracted since the organization of the national government as it became due.

They have paid four-fifths of the debt contracted during the Cfvil War, and the prospect was hopeful that all of it would be paid before the close of this century, but this reversal of our standards of value has, like the fire-bell at night, startled and alarmed our people. Let us settle it by following the action of Washington, Hamilton, Jefferson, Jackson, Hunter, Lincoln and Grant. Let us maintain silver and gold at par with each other at the legal ratio of 16 to 1 until a conference among nations can prescribe common standards of value. In the meantime let no act be done, no policy be adopted, no expedient resorted to that will tarnish the honor of this great republic.

FORAKER'S WITTY SPEECH.

Senator Sherman was frequently interrupted with applause. When Gov.

Senator Sherman was frequently in-terrupted with applause. When Gov. Bushnell next introduced Senator-elect Foraker there was deafening applause The audience was expectant, and Sen-ator Foraker was allve to the situation The audience was expectant, and Senator Foraker was alive to the situation. His speech swayed the immense audience at his will. During the course of his remarks, Senator Foraker said:

"We have a new question this year. The Democracy has started a new issue. Why is it they have made a new issue. Why is it they have made a new issue. They have run completely out of the old. They were whipped to a standstill before they started on the tariff, and they were defeated before they started on the tariff, and they were defeated before they started on the tariff pecause, unlike 1892, we now, all of us, understand the tariff question. You cannot find a laboring man anywhere in the United States who does not now understand without an argument, that if you make a product across the water in some other country, you do not have to make it in this country. That if you make it over there, there is an increased demand for labor over there, and that much less demand for labor over here. That is what the laboring man has learned.

and which, owing to the influence of the influence of the influence of the laboring man anywhere in the United States who does not now understand the tariff question. You cannot find a laboring man anywhere in the United States who does not now understand without an argument that was understand the tariff question. You do not have to make the country, you do not have to make it over there, there is an increased demand for labor over here, and the manual to laboring man has learned.

The farmer has learned something, too. Times have been pretty hard on him. He is selling his products at the cheapest price ever known since before he war. He has found out that to have good demand and to get good prices for his product he must have a good home market.

"And there is Uncle Sam himself. He has been down out has to have good demand and to get good prices for his product he must have a good home market.

"And there is Uncle Sam himself. He has been down out has been market."

"And there is Uncle Sam himself. He has found out that to have good demand and to get good prices for his product he must have a good home market.

"Now my fellow out the debt. During the three years and a fraction of the product free-trade rule they have paid off and cancelled forever, more than one thousand seven hundred millions of the public debt more than $22,000,000. Uncle Sam is just now calculating how long at that he wants a change, and he have a good been people did in this products and the product of the reform of the military trials is that will have a change just as soon as the law and the Constitution will allow it. "Now, my fellow-citizens, I would rather take the judgment of John Sherman on financial question, foliow the leadership of Benjamin Harrison than the judgment of Mary Ellen Lease. I would rather take the judgment of John Sherman on financial question, foliow the leadership of Benjamin Harrison than the judgment of Mary Ellen Lease. I would rather follow the leadership of Benjamin Harrison than the judgment of Mary Ellen L market.

UNCLE SAM'S DISCOVERY.

"And there is Uncle Sam himself. He has found out something. In the twenty-seven years that the Republican party controlled this country after the close of the war down to 1892, we paid off and cancelled forever, more than one thousand seven hundred millions of the public debt. During the three years and a fraction of the Democratic free-trade rule they have paid off nothing, but have increased the public debt more than $262,000,000. Uncle Sam is just now calculating how long at that rate it will take him to get out of debt. He has made up his mind, as some other people did in 1892, that he wants a change, and he will have a change just as soon as the law and the Constitution will allow it. "Now, my fellow-citizens, I would rather take the judgment of John Sherman on financial propositions than the judgment of Mary Ellen Lease. I would rather, on'a profound constitutional or financial question, follow the leadership of Benjamin Harrison than that of 'Pitchfork' Tillman.' I would rather trust Gov. Bushnell than Gov. McKinley with all these great representatives of sound money, sound protection, sound patriotism and sound everything else supporting him than to take 'the boy orator of the Platte' with all these people controlling him.

"I read a day or two aro—and it took me a day or two to do it—the speech made by the 'boy orator of the' Platte' when he was notified in New York. It occupied several columns of close print. I read every word of it; and when I got done with it, I thought I knew why he was called the 'boy orator of the Platte.' Geography tells us that the Platte is a very peculiar ther.

raphy tells us that the Platte is a very peculiar river. They say it is a thousand miles long and only six inches deep. As I closed the reading of it, I had another thought about him. I said aloud: Mr. Bryan made himself by one speech, and now he has unmade himself by one speech.

"No man will ever be made President of the United States on that speech. What is the nature of this case? There is a great effort being made to create the impression that the Republican party has changed its position in regard to this matter. That is not true. The Republicans party has not changed. It is more explicit in its declarations this year than ever before, because the circumstances were such because the circumstances were such as to require a more explicit declara-tion, but the Republican party has de-clared this year for identically the same thing is declared for in 1892. I know, I was there. "Our declaration in 1892 and our dec-laration in 1896 are both declarations

"Our declaration in 1892 and our declaration in 1896 are both declarations in favor, as I have said a minute ago, of bimetallism when you can have it, and we think we can have it by an international agreement, but are declarations in favor of maintaining until then the existing gold standard and not being allowed to be driven to a silver standard."

TWO FOR ONE.

The speaker then produced two Mexican silver dollars which he said he had bought on the street with one and bought on the street with one American dollar, containing six grains less of pure silver than either of the Mexicans dollars, but backed up by the promise of the United States to maintain it on a parity with gold.

THE MEAT IN THE COCOANUT.

Continuing, he praised the Repub-lican party's financial policy which he said had made the currency of the United States, whether of paper, silver or gold, worth its face value the world over. He said there had never to express this opinion of a measure favored by many good people, but I cannot regard it in any other light but both a fraud and a robbery, and all the worse if committed by a great, rich and free people. A citizen who should commit such an offense would be punished by the courts or denounced as dishonest, but a nation like ours is beyond the power of any tribunal, but the conscience of God.

HONOR AND GOOD FAITH INVOLVED.

Now, fellow-citizens, I have said all I desire to say at present on the free coinage of silver, I have the confident hope that the great body of the Republicans and Democrats, representing the conservative element of our people, will stamp their rebuke upon this measure of infamy and thus preserve intact the honor, the credit and glory of our great country. EMPEROR WILLIAM HAS A NEW MINISTER OF WAR.

Gen. von Schellendorf Differs with His Majesty on Military Reforms The Chancellor Will not Resign for the Present-Foreign Affairs

MY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE. BERLIN, Aug. 15 .- (By Atlantic Cable. Associated Press Copyright, 1896.) The official announcement that Gen. Bronsart von Schellendorf, the Minister of War, had been removed from office, and that he would be succeeded by Gen. von Gossler, startled the political world this afternoon. The War Minister's difference with the Emperor regarding the long-planned military trial reform has been a topic for discussion for a long time past, and it was known that unless His Majesty acquiesced to Gen. von Schellendorf's view in the matter, von Schellendor's view in the matter, which was also the view of the Imperial Chancellor, Prince Hohenlohe, both intended to resign.

But it was thought that the crisis would be tided oyer until after the Czar's visit to Berlin, and it appears that the true reason which induced the Emperor to abandon his projected trip to the Rhine provinces was not physical indisposition, but the fact that Prince Hohenlohe and Gen. von Schellendorf had intimated to His Majesty that they would resign unless he agreed to the military trial reform, to which the Ministers were publicly pledged, and which, owing to the influence of the Emperor's private Military Cabinet, especially that of Gen. von Hahnke, the alde-de-camp, would be deferred repeatedly.

The Emigration Bill which will be introduced in the Reichstag at the opening of the session, is now drafted. A pan-German federation and a colonial council have been the determining factors in its framing. A central emigration bureau, assisted by an emigration council, will be created; emigration agents will be especially licensed; false information to emigrants as to their prospects will be made a punishable offense, and the encouragement of emigration among miners under certain conditions will be made apunishable by imprisonment and a fine. The Hamburg correspondent, in an article inspired by the Foreign Office, remarks that the negotiations between Germany and Denmrak for the purpose of inducing the latter to sell her Antilles Islands, will soon be resumed. The article adds: "As for the Monroe doctrine, there is no question of new European acquisitions, and the doctrine is nowhere recognized outside of the United States."

No one familiar with the inside workings of the Democrat-Populist campaign would be sur-prised to learn at any time that Chairman Jones had resigned. Indeed, there is good reason to believe that influences are working to force Senator Jones to get out.

LOUISVILLE (Ky.,) Aug. 15.—The movement for a State organization of gold-standard Democrats, decided on at a conference held in this city recently, ook the form today of mass conventions at county seats all over the State. Resolutions were adopted, setting forth the views of this faction of the party, and delegates were chosen to attend the State convention, to be held in Louisville next Thursday. At the Louisville and Lexington meetings a boom for Gen. Buckner for Vice-President was started, and at the same meetings preferences for delegates-at-large to the national convention were expressed.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 15.—A special to the commercial-Tribuns from Lexington, Ky., says ex-Congressman W. Co. P. Breckinridge and the Fayette county Democratic Convention this afternoon renounced the Chicago platform and advocated a third ticket.

The resolutions as adopted contained the following financial paragraph: "The free coinage of sliver can never be obtained, and the futile attempt to accomplish it has caused the Democratic party to lose power, caused lack of confidence, paralyzed business, bankrupted thousands, deprived labor of employment and suspended manufacturing, and until this agitation is ended the present condition will continue."

Comment here is that while the Secretary is for Bryan and Sewall, and would like to come, he cannot afford to do so while the relations between himself and the President are so strained.

After expressing regret that he cannot be present, he says: "The opinions which I have often expressed on financial questions I scill advocate, but I also had occasion then to say that when the National Democratic Convention named candidates for President and Vice-President, no matter what might be the action of the convention up on thefinancial position, all Democrats should support the nominness. This position I then believed to be correct, and I am prepared to sustain with equal sincerity now. The Democratic party does not confine its platform to a single issue nor will its power to serve the people cease with the solution of that issue, It stands for just taxation."

The letter indicates a purpose to have a thorough popular organization throughout the county. Chairman Jones's letter to President Black is as follows:

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Aug. 7. 1896. Hon. Chauncey F. Black, President of the National Association of Democratic Clubs—My Dear Sir: In view of the great services rendered to the Democratic party in the past by the organization of which you are president, I take the liberty of writing you, to urge that you push the organization of clubs with all possible energy in the States of the Union. If you can have clubs organized in every township and school district in the country and in every ward in the cities and towns you will, in my opinon, accomplish great results for the Democratic party. Please give immediate attention to this most important matter, and urge upon your State and county organizers in all sections of the Union the necessity for prompt and energetic action. Hoping to hear from you favorably, I am.

FUTURITY WON BY AN OUTSIDER.

Ogden Winner of the Rich Stake.

Sloane Lands Ornament Second by Half a Length.

"Good Thing" Challenger is Fifth in the Procession.

Two National Championships Run Off at Louisville-Closing Races at Fort Wayne - Pittsburgh Whitewashes Cleveland.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.) NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The great Futurity stakes of the Coney Island Jockey Club is over, and the ninth re-newal has gone into history with an outsider as the winner. The track, while a little heavy, was in good condi-tion. The day was well-nigh perfect and the 10,000 people who filled the grand stand and lawns were out in hol-idy attire to watch the contest, which is supposed to stamp the best 2-year-old of the season.

At exactly five minutes to 5 o'clock the bugle called the ten contestants to the post, and with little enthusiasm they trotted past the standto the chute. One, two and three false breaks were made, with a number of single break-aways, and after a delay of twenty-five minutes they were sent away in fair order, with Ogden in the lead and Box second, Panmure third and Rhodesia fourth. They did not shift in their positions until they were at the quarter-pole, and Ogden was still in front by a head only, but Tuberville had him well in hand and was waiting for the final rush.

The crack Keene filly Rhodesia was next, but Simms was at work on her and she was but a head in front Rodermond, on whom Hill was doing his best. Next came the favorite, Ornament, and it seemed then as if the race would be between these four, as the others were practically in the second division and struggling hard to get up to the fiying leaders. The "good taing," Challenger, was fifth and laboring nard, while behind him were Bastian, Panmure, Box and Newsgatherer, already out of the contest, while Taral had Scottish Chieftan well in hand for the finish.

erer, already out of the contest, while Taral had Scottish Chieftan well in hand for the finish.

The speed was increased a bit now, and as Tuberville urged Ogden a trifle he shot a little ahead of Ornament, who had passed Rhodesia, the filly a little in advance of Rodermond, while Taral had carried Scottish Chieftain past Challenger, a beaten horse. As they rounded the bend into the main track Sloane began to work still harder on Ornament, but his work was of little avail, for in front of him was the copper and green jacket of Tuberville on the other Westerner, Ogden, still leading by half a length. Rodermond had by this time passed Rhodesia, who had got enough of it, and was trying to quit in spite of all that Simms could do. Taral was trying his best with Scottish Chieftain, and was gaining inch by inch on the filly. They were now around the turn, and each boy could see the big purse hung up at the judges' stand, with chances for only four of them.

The five-eighths was in sight, was passed, and the boys working hard. Tuberville still had a half length the better of Ornament, with Sioane unable to do much for his mount, as he was sadly tired and had worked his passage all the way. He was a length and a half in front of Rodermond, with the others absolutely out of it. With only a furlong more, Sloane bent again to his work and seemed to be gaining a trifle on the flying Ogden, when there was a crack in the atmosphere and Ogden was gone. He was nearly two lengths ahead and all other chances had vanished, for amid the cries of the crowd Ogden sild past the judges' stand with $44,290 as his reward, while Ornament had to be content with second place by half a length and $3666. Rodermond was third, with $1833, while the-others were away out of it, badly beaten. The best two-year-old was till an open question, but the hand for the finish.

JOCKEYING AT LOUISVILLE.

The National Meet Ends in an Ugly Wrangle-Winners.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

LOUISVILLE (Ky.,) Aug. 15.—The L.A.W. national meet came to a close this afternoon in an ugly wrangle over the five-mile national championship. I was a scrap from beginning to end There was no end of jockeying, and at one time Cooper and Bald had their hands off their handle bars, grasping at and pushing each other, imperiling the lives of a dozen or more contestants. the race going to W. E. Backer of Minneapolis, with E. S. Aker of Philadelphia second, and Nat Butler third.
This race was the last on the card, the last of the meet. It was called in the face of an approaching storm, but before the race had well begun it became stormler even than the warring elements overhead. Nearly all of the big men of the game started, for the trial heats were omitted, and the entries were left to the election of the riders.
Tom Butler and Ziegler stayed out, but Cooper, Gardiner. Bald, Coburn and the others made a representative string. A triplet manned by Schrein and Gardiner went to the front with Bald, Cooper and J. Coburn, and dropped back. This was but the signal for one after another of the contestants to go up ahead, some catching successfully, and some failing to make good their game. While this was going on Cooper and Bald came-together, Cooper elbowing his great antagonist, while the Buffalo man adopted similar tactic and reached out viciously for his successful rival. Trouble kept up throughout the balance of the ride, and the grand stand manifested its displeasure by hissing every time the bunch came around.

The consequence of the final sprint was that Cooper won, with Becker a length back, and Callahan in third place. Aker and Nat Butler, unplaced, finishing as named, but when all the protesting and wrangling was over Cooper and Callahan had been discussified, and the championship went to Becker. Aker taking second and Nati Butler third. Gardiner and Raid came in as named on Butler's rear. The time for the five miles was 12m, 18 2-5see.

Up to the time of this unpleasant affair, the feature of the day, and of the meet so far. was the victory of Sanger in the two-mile handicap for professionals. If any one doubted "Wooden. Shoes's" popularity, he should have heard the crowd cheer him when he scored his first and only victory of the meeting, and seen his enthusiastic friends shoulder him and carry him from the track. The Milwaukeean had rlayed in hard lines, but he retrieved himself, rid ng the event in his old-time form, and winning in a driving sprint that carried him around the bunch as though he was trying to run cycles about them.

Sanger had the scratch with Kennedy. Callahan and Eaton just ahead of him, and these four succeeded in getting together early in the game. Callahan paced for the first half-mile and then Sanger came up. The result was that he caught the big bunch ahead. The field at once slowed down and the men loafed along for nearly a mile with Van Herrick out in front, E. C. Johnson and then Callahan. Sanger got down to his work just as the bell tapped, swinging along with his high great with an increasing stride that brought him at evens with the head of the bunch before the final jump started. The big fellow had been beautifully pocketed on the back stretch and his admirers in the grand stand went wild with enthusiasm as his maneuver was successfully worked.

Callahan was still at the head of the bunch, with Kennedy lapping his wheel from the outside and as Sanger went by Kennedy left the diminutive Buffaloman and went after him. The big fellow had been beautifully pocketed and as Sanger went by Kennedy end (or Callahan was with a first lap Kennedy and Schrein. and was nighting to the very last. The time of the mile was 2:19 2-5—good time for an unpaced event.

Allen led off for the half-mile national championship, but at the second turn Cooper came up and took the pace with Allen, Bald, Butler and Gardiner strung out in his rear. On the back stretch Butler jumped, pulling Gardiner up with him, but when Butler dropped down on the pole back of Cooper Gardiner was forced to the center between Hill and Bald. The men fought a game and shifting battle down the short straight, Bald, Cooper and Butler on almost even terms, and Gardiner and Allen looking for an opening. Bald had the advantage until the last twenty yards, when Butler jumped and got his wheel half a dozen inches in front. At the tape Gardiner shot to the front, and lapped Bald, showing Cooper the way in by an open length.

showing Cooper the way in by an open length.

The amateur events were well-contested. Ingram won the mile open with case, but was beaten out in a hot finish in the mile hadicap by Howard of St. Louis.

The two-mile State championship went to W. H. Seaton, Jr., while McCarthy of St. Louis piloted in the field of 2:30-class men.

A rain same up just after the five-mile championship, making it necessary to abandon some record trials that were to wind up the last day of the meet. The crowd was as large as on the preceding days, about six thousand, and the most enthuslastic seen during the meeting. The most of the racing men leave tonight or tomorrow for Indiagraphic and fire well for the results and the most conditions of the racing men leave tonight or tomorrow nen leave tonight or tomorrow for Indianapolis and Erie.

100 miners' inches of water goes free of cost with every ranch I sell, and only costs floo an hour each time you irrigate; a miner's inch of water is equal to 12 gallons per minute. The farmers of this section live easier, work less and make more clear money than any place in the State. Some of them have cut their alfalfa 7 times this season.

In this valley alfalfa is king. We cut it 7 to 9 times a year, I to 2 tons per acre each cutting. It sells from $6$ to $12$ at on, loose in the field. Within a radius of 6 miles we have 17 water companies, all owned by the farmers; if you can't make money farming in this valley, you can't make money farming anywhere in the United States.

We have more water and cheaper water to the acre than any valley in the State, and if you can milk cows, call hogs, cut, rake and haul alfalfa and barley hay, husk 100 bushels of corn to the acre, handle 200-pound pumpkins and 100-pound citrons and watermelons, raise turkeys, feed chickens, gather the eggs, get up early, feed happy, and want to make money, come and get you a ranch; now is the time to buy, while land is cheap.

Kregelo & Bresee Victims of a Small Robbery.

W. M. B. Vaughn, who was employed at the undertaking establishment of Kregelo and Bresee on Broadway, was arrested by Officer Cicotte after a lively chase yesterday afternoon, and locked up at police headquarters. It is said that Vaughn yesterday noon robbed his employers of about $20$. The money was in a desk, and, during the absence of others from the office, Vaughn is said to have taken the money and left the place. He was seen near the Plaza a little later by Officer Cicotte, the matter having been reported to the police, and when he saw the efficer, started to run, but was finally captured. Nearly all the stolen money was found Nearly all the stolen money was for person, and it is probable that he prosceuted.

Writ to Foreclose a Fifteen-million-dollar Mortgage-Engineer Corn-well Leaves Three Widows. Attack on the Craven Will.

(BY THE TIMES' SPECIAL WIRE.)

CHICO, Aug. 15.—(Special Dispatch.) On Thursday Ira Crum of Chico had a most thrilling and miraculous escape from certain death. A party of thirty ladies and gentlemen, who have been camping in the mountains, made the ascent of Mt. Lassen. The trip was laborious, the trail being exceedingly hard to follow. When they reached the top, Ira, who was one of the party, while standing on the edge of the mountain, lost his hat, which blew but a short distance on the snow. Thinking he could secure it safely, Crum stepped out on the snow. No sooner had he fairly started when his feet slipped from under him and away he went down the mountain.

He slid with lightning rapidity to the very edge of a deep precipice, and there he stuck in the snow. Had he gone six feet further he would have most thrilling and miraculous escape gone six feet further he would have fallen 2000 feet onto the rocks below, and would have certainly been dashed to pieces. Friends on top of the mounto pieces. First tain could see him clinging to the snow for dear life. His two sisters, Miss Alice and Miss Vila Crum, were in the party and were terribly frightened. Various schemes of relief were proposed, but finally it was decided to take a couple of short sticks, and, by starting on a level with the clinging boy dig a trail along the banks of the precipice to where he was. This was an exceedingly slow and dangerous undertaking, as one misstep would cause them to be hurled to instant

When the rescuers reached Crum they found him nearly unconscious from cold, and his hands and feet nearly coid, and his hands and feet nearly frozen. Ira was finally released from his dangerous position, but a man named Collins and a doctor had to carry him out, so badly was he used up.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15.—George W. Cornwell, the oldest locomotive engineer on the Coast division of the Southern Pacific, died Wednesday and at his funeral three women appeared, each claiming to be his widow. Two used the name of Mrs. Cornwell, but the third said she had been married to the deceased under the name of George Parker. The one of the three women who has known Cornwell longwomen who has known Cornwell long-est is now described as the "San José widow" by the neighbors, because she resides in that city. She declares the dead engineer is the father of a son aged 35. Cornwell lived with her from 1860 to 1872. Then he met and married a woman who is known as Mrs. Cornwell at No. 1802 Howard street.

Mrs. Cornwell at No. 1802 Howard street.

In 1888 Cornwell met Mrs. Parker, and, teling her his name was the same as that of her former husband, George Parker, married her. He installed her in a house a block from that of Mrs. Cornwell No. 2. Mrs. Parker knew nothing of the other two wives, and No. 2 was not aware of the existence of No. 3, in whose house he died. The engineer was 59 years old. He had been on the Pacific Coast thirtysix years, all of the time in the employ of the Central and Southern Pacific Raliroads. He leaves about $3000, his earnings having all gone to support his numerous wives.

San Francisco County Clerk. SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15.—Another valuable paper is missing from the County Clerk's office and the presumption is that it has been stolen in the interest of some of the parties concerned in the litigation over the estate of the late Joshua Hendy. Mrs. Josephine Green, the favorite niece of Hendy, un til she married, was legatee to $20,000. To prevent litigation over this bequest a compromise was made by which Mrs. Green was to share in every partial distribution of the estate. The estate consisted of stock in the Hendy machine works, the value depending upon the assets of the company.

Mrs. Green petitioned for the removal of executors, alleging that they borrowed money from the estate to put into business which should be prosperous and that the estate was being til she married, was legatee to $20,000 into business which should be prosperous, and that the estate was being looted. A few days ago the executors filed a report and petition for a partial distribution. There was a discrepancy between this report and the original inventory, so Mrs. Green claimed. Her attorney went to the County Clerk's office to consult the inventory and found it had disappeared. Samuel and John Hendy are executors.

ready working up the THE IRISH AND THEOSOPHY. LONDON, Aug. 15. -- (By Atlantic Cable. Associated Press, Copyright, 1896.) Parliament closes up today in a more lively and spirited manner than has been the case with any session for years. In the whole of the Parliament the man who has most bettered him-self is "Tim" Healy. He began the session as one of John Dillon's seventy-one followers, and he ends it as the leader of his own party with about twenty-five followers.

It is said that the Irish convention which meets in Dublin in September is destined to be a fizzle. Neither the Parnellites nor the Healyites will atend, so the whole object of the convention is thwarted and Mr. Dillon expects if the Parnellites and other factionists do not attend that the latter will be put in an awkard moral position on the

do not attend that the latter will be put in an awkard moral position on the ground that when the union of the different sections of the Irish party was attempted they stood out.

In the meantime Ireland is perfectly tranquil and continues steadily improving. For several years there have been good harvests in Ireland and the "peasantry" are generally satisfied. The little band of American crusaders for theosophy is receiving considerance attention in the columns of the English newspapers and has given the Irish press an entirely new theme for discussion. Shortly after landing the Americans uttered a prophesy that Ireland soon was to become the ruler of Europe and that the ancient giories of that mystic island would be restored. Also that the theosophists proposed to establish a branch of their American College of Occultism there. The Irish newspapers are evidently pleased with the idea, and some of the principal papers of Dublin and elsewhere have thrown open their columns for its discussion.

The crusaders have certainly proven thrown open their columns for its discussion.

The crusaders have certainly proven a surprise. When it was at first announced that eight Americans were going to institute a crusade which would not stop until the globe had been girdled, it was not received seriously. But what the party lacks in numbers it makes up in theosophical strength.

Arriving at London, the little party engaged the Queen's Hall and held a meeting there. The women sat on the stage in flowing white robes and the men in evening dress. This meeting was followed by an invention called a "brotherhood supper," held in the slums. Socialists, Anarchists, dock laborers, outcast and the poor generally were erved with a hearty meal—the first many of them had partaken of in months, and then were afterward given a talk on "Brotherhood." The same thing was done in the slums of Liverpool. The Rev. W. Williams, a chaplain in the British army, joined the crusade.

In Dublin a convention of the whole society in Europe was called. The society in Europe was called. The society in Europe boasts of some distinguished adherents, among them being Prof. Crooke, the English chemist who invented the Crooke's ray tubes; Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, and, it is said, Mrs. Benson, wife of the Archbishop of Canterbury who with her two sons, it is stated, joined the theosophists recently.

In a few days the party will leave Ireland for Amsterdam, Berlin and Faris. The intention is to visit every European capital and Rome Itself is to be "stormed." Leaving Europe, the crusaders will go to Malta and Egypt. Then will follow Australia, New Zealand and Asia. The return is to be by way of San Francisco in about March.

MPORTANT TESTIMONY OF YOUNG ENGLISH STUDENT.

wears That Win Chew Gow Ran from the Scene of the Shooting of Wong Chee-Two Other Witnesses Testify.

A decided sensation was spining yes terday in the preliminary examination of Gong On Chong and Win Chew Gow, the two Chinamen accused of the mur-der of Wong Chee, when Percy Ham-mond-Bell, a young English journalist and medical student of No. 616 West Sixth street, swore that he had seen Win Chew Gow run from the corner at the time of the shooting of Chee.

Win Chew Gow run from the corner at the time of the shooting of Chee. Even the attorneys for the prosecution were surprised at the importance of the testimony of their own witness as none of them had held a consultation with him.

The continuation of the examination was begun at 2:30 o'clock before Justice Owens, and the dingy little courtroom was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the eager crowd which surged in to get a glimpse of the two suspects. Mingled with the throng were a great many Chinamen, whose jargon became so annoying that Justice Owens ordered the courtroom cleared of all who did not have seats.

The first witness called was Police Officer John Collins. He testified that he heard the shot fired which ended Chee's life, and ran to the spot and assisted in keeping the crowd back until the arrival of the partol wagon in which Chee was removed to the Receiving Hoopital.

Officer John Stephenson, the policeman who arrested Win Chee Gow, was next called. Stephenson testified that "Big Tom," as Gow is also called, had a hand in the murder, and that Ah Mow also had. Witness then told the circumstances of "Big Tom's" arrest

The next witness was Percy Hammond-Bell, who gave the most damaging testimony yet given against Win Chew Gow. He testified that on the night of the shooting he was crossing Alameda street on Marchessault. When about twenty feet from the curbing on the west side of Alameda street he heard a pistol shot and, turning, saw a man fall on Alameda street near Marchessault street. He also saw three Chinamen run from the spot, and testified: "I could only tell by the outline, and as soon as I saw the prisoner I almost immediately identified him as the tallest of the three who were running away."

ss was asked if he saw the witness was asked in he saw the man in the courtroom, and in reply pointed to Win Chew Gow. He testified that he was the first to get to Wong Chee's side, and as he had studied medicine, made an examination of the wound, inserting his finger and feeling the lacerations. He was there when the patrol wagon came and remained in the vicinity until the wounded man had been taken away.

Judge Ling conducted the cross-examination, and attempted to brow-beat the witness. His first question, "How long have you been in Chinatown?" was objected to by the prosecution, and the objection was sustained. The cross-examination developed that Hammond-Bell had been studying the Chinese language for two months in cross-examination developed that Hammond-Bell had been studying the Chinese language for two months in Chinatown. Ling asked what else he had been studying and wanted to know if he had learned to smoke opium yet. Witness replied in emphatic tones that he had not. He said he had not become accustomed to Chinese methods and had been in this country only since January 1. Ling asked if he intended to leave town before the trial of the case, and witness replied that he fully expected to be here. The attorney then questioned him closely as to his movements on the night in question, and witness testified that he left his home at 8 o'clock in the evening and went to the Palace cigar stand, where he met a friend of his, George Perry by name. He talked to him for a quarter of an hour and then went to Chinatown, No. 220 Marchessault street being his destination.

At this juncture the court took a recess until 9:30 tomorrow morning, with Hammond-Bell on the stand, the defense having signally failed to shake his' direct testimony in the slightest particular.

The adjourned meeting was held in Methodist Episcopal Church at the ner of Sixth street and Maple aveie, the lease of Illinois Hall having expired at 12 p.m. Friday. It was fully tended and the delegates were all aced for the coming struggle which uld decide the fate of the convencalled to order by President Morton, and prayer was offered by Rev. J. H. Kelly of Pagadena. Secretary J. F. Summers called the roll of delegates, showing a full attendance. To save time the reading of the minutes was dispensed with until the afternoon session, and the matter of the election of a State lecturer was at once taken up. Rev. S. W. Hawkins made the first speech upon this subject, dwelling upon the important and arduous duties of this office, and placing in nomination J. Neimore of Los Angeles Dr. Sikes, with an unmerciful exercise of quite unusual lung power, nominated A. A. Collins of Alameda. C. C. Filnt of Los Angeles was nominated by T. J. Jean of Pasadena. A rule had been passed at the session of the day before that each candidate should receive but one speech in support of his nomination, and the infringement of this rule by two or three men threatened to put the hoodlum element in evidence again by giving a chance for another disturbance. When quiet was restored, W. E. Henderson of San Francisco, the young lawyer who has been so prominent throughout the convention as the originator of the sound political resolutions, was nominated for the office of State lecturer by C. C. Holford, seconded by A. V. Jones, C. C. Flint having delined in favor of J. J. Neimore; the lominations were closed and the convention was precipitated over the question of voting by ballot and the uproar was a terrific as at any time during the convention. The rough element of the Los Angeles delegation came to the front for a few minutes, and the convention was turned into a disorganized mob.

President Morton was called out to attend to a matter of railroad certificalled to order by President Morton and the convention was turned into a disorganized; mob.

President Morton was called out to attend to a matter of railroad certificates, and Vice-President Sebree was called to the chair. He did his best to keep order, but that was out of the power of mortal man, and pandemonium reigned supreme. The Los Angeles men made the same old fight for the open vote that nearly wrecked the convention Friday afternoon. At last, order was restored, and the ruling of the chair in favor of the Australian ballot was sustained.

Noise being an inevitable accompaniment of everything these people do, it was not to be expected that the voting would be quiet, but the counting of the ballots gave a respite of a few minutes, until the announcement of the election of J. J. Nelmore produced a roar of applause.

During the disturbance that preceded.

During the disturbance that preceded he bailoting, Jacob Soares, one of the henchmen of the free-silver faction, produced a still greater uproar by at-tempting to call into question the criticism made in The Times upon the proceedings of the unruly people during the elections of the day before. He was summarily called down by the presiding officer, and hooted into unwilling silence by the indignant delegates. This was a matter of some difficulty, but, when peace was restored, Soares found it best to leave the convention and not return. This man was one of the most turbulent of the rougher element, and had been at the bottom of nearly every outbreak of disorder. Many apologies were made by the representative men of the better The Times upon the prorougher element, and had been at the bottom of nearly every outbreak of disorder. Many apologies were made by the representative men of the better class for the insult offered to the press. A motion to adjourn until 3 p.m. was then made, but it met with vigorous opposition by a large majority of the vising delegates. It was well understood that some of the Los Angeles and Oakland men, who were suspected to be in the pay of the Democratic party, were making every effort to gain time, and stave off the reading of the resolutions which would pledge the league, as a hody, to indorse the nomination of McKinley and Hobart, and to support the principles of the Republican party. After a hot debate, the motion to adjourn was laid aside.

Delegate W. E. Henderson of San Francisco, chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, then presented the following report, which embodied the resolutions approved by the committee: "We, the Afro-Americans of the State of California, feeling the oppression of the Afro-American throughout the United States, by laws enacted by the various States which circumscribe our rights, and being aware of the many impediments that are thrown in the way of our progress, and in order that these conditions may be overcome and that we may succeed to all the rights of American citizenship, feel, at this time, that a declaration of sentiment is absolutely necessary.

"It is resolved, that this congress heartily approves of the establishment of cooperative enterprises throughout the State, and recommends that the State Executive Council originate some plan whereby this may be accomplished. "It is further resolved, that the purchase of land by the leagues of the State would tend to increase the importance of our race and bring it in closer contact with the monied interests.

"It is further resolved, that the purchase of land by the leagues of the State would tend to increase the importance of our race and bring it in closer contact with the monied interests.

"It is further resolved that, as woman has proven posed the repeal of this said law, be denounced as unfriendly to the race.

"It is further resolved, that the attitude of Senator Withington, in his efforts to secure the repeal of the black law, commends itself to every Afro-American as worthy of highest regard, and that the support of the congress be promised him.

and that the support of the congress be promised him.

"It is further resolved, that the congress oppose all laws abridging the rights of American citizens and tending to create class legislation.

"It is further resolved that the congress is uncompromisingly opposed to the existence of all organizations throughout this State and the Union known by the name of trades of labor unions, believing that such organizations are not conducive to good citizenship, as their method excites riots, fosters anarchy, and causes the wilful destruction of life and, property and much suffering among the laboring classes.

"It is further resolved that the congress believes such organizations to be a glgantic monophy of labor, and should be abolished by statutory enactments.

"It is further resolved, that the congress believes the free and unlimited coirage of silver to be both hazardous and ruinous to the business interests of the country.

"It is further resolved, that the convention does not believe that this government can maintain the purchasing power of a silver dollar to be equal to that of a gold dollar, at the ratio of that of a gold dollar, at the ratio of 16 to 1.

"It is further resolved, that the congress recommends the reduction of the number of representativs in Congress from those States where the right of suffrage is denied a part of its citizens, and that the said representation be based upon the number of votes that are actually cast, and not upon the representation based upon the number of citizens as is alowed in those States where a free ballot and fair count prevails.

"It is finally resolved, that the congress renews its confidence in the principles of the great Republican party as represented by its leaders in national convention assembled at St. Louis, and by its platform as there adopted, believing that the party has been in the right on all great national questions. That said Republican convention having nominated Maj. William McKinley of Ohio, as its standard-bearer, we pledge ourselves to use our utmost efforts for the success of the Republican party and for his election." After the reading of these resolutions Delegate J. Y. Barnard moved that one speaker be selected to champion the resolutions, and another to oppose in joint debate, giving as his reasons that the constant wrangle which would be sure to follow if all were given unlimited scope could be thus quenched and much valuable time saved. The speaker had scarcely concluded his remarks when the rough element, backed by the Democratic clique, again endeavored to dominate the convention, their object being to down the resolutions and supplant them with another resolution offered by G. G. Brown in favor of the free coinage of silver, which had been thrown out by the Resolution Committee. In this they made a signal fallure, although they managed to slip in and have seconded before opposition could be offered a motion to have the resolutions voted upon by sections. This motion having been placed to a vote, was carried.

No opposition was offered to the preamble which was unanimously adopted, as were also the first and second resolutions favoring coöperation and the acquisition of landed property by the Afro-Americans. When the resolution which favors woman suffrage was brought forward, it excited the inevitable discussion which prevails among both white and black politicisms whenever this subject is mentioned, but the clause was finally adopted by the vote of a large majority.

The clause favoring the repeal of the "Black law" in the Civil Code of California was adopted unanimously.

would do well to follow, and which every man would follow unless he had been led astray by demagogues, or bought with gold.

Several of the Democratic henchmen here made such an uproar that the speaker was obliged to stop for a moment, but he concluded his speech in triumph, and with great effect. An irrepressible young howler named Miller rose to destroy the effect of Mr. Young's speech by saying that a resolution to indorse McKinley would simply turn the Afro-American League into a gigantic Republican Club, but he was somewhat disconcerted by the cheers and the yells of "Good, good," which came from every side.

The main contention, aside from the efforts of the small political gang which had tried in vain to control or break up the convention, was upon the question of the Afro-American League keeping entirely out of politics, as far as the league itself was concerned. Many good Republicans, who were members of Republican clubs and openly expressed their intention of voting for McKinley themselves, and of doing everything in their power to procure his election, opposed the idea of passing a formal resolution of the Afro-American Congress to indorse him, simply because it would lend the political complexion to the league which they were so desirous to avoid.

Many speeches were made on both sides, the leaders of the opposition being: J. B. Wilson, editor of the San Francisco Elevator: James F. Summers, A. A. Collins, George E. Watkins, T. M. McClelland and T. M. Hickman. Every means, fair and unfair, was used to keep Delegate Henderson off the floor. At the close, however, he claimed the right, as the author of the resolution, to make the closing argument. This carried the day. The motion to adopt was put to the vote, and carried by a little over haif, the division of the house showing 35 to 30 for adoption. Many of the moderates refused to vote, because of their leaning toward the non-partisanship of the league.

Secretary Summers then read the following telegrams, sent to President Morton by prominent member

I will not enter into a discussion of protection or free trade, but history points to the fact that there are always riots and labor troubles when Democracy is in the as-cendancy. In 1876, when the Demo-crats claimed the election of Tilden, there were the Mollie Maguire trouthere were the Mollie Maguire troubles, the Pittsburgh and East St. Louis railroad riots and the Chicago Lincoln Park riot. As soon as Hayes was inaugurated, the riots stopped. Then when Cleveland was elected with promises of tariff reform, we had the Chicago Anarchistic riots, and the New York dock riots. With the passage of the McKinley law, these disturbances ceased. Then Cleveland was elected again and the year following his inauguration came Coxey's army and the Deb's strike. Now this line of effects must have a cause, and the of effects must have a cause, and the only discernible cause rests in the tariff, for I do not believe individual Democrats are more anarchistic than their fellows who are Republicans. It is simply the natural discontent brought about by the unwise principles of Democracy. They do not occur when Republicans have control of governmental affilia. governmental affairs.

the defeat of Bryan and Sewall lies in the fact that Bryan intends to take the stump in his own behalf, while McKinley remains at home. Bryan is by no means the first who has made this mistake, the last being James G. Blaine. There is something undig-nified in a candidate for the office of President going upon the hustings that the people resent, and every candidate who has ever done it, including several men who were exceedingly popular, has been defeated. The people want to hear their candidates for Congress, but as to the highest position in the land, they feel that the office should seek the man, and not the man the office. Maj. paign just now is one that I regret to see injected into it. The formation of the McKinley League has aroused the Bryan papers, for the reason that forty of the members have wealth aggregating about $500,000,000, including such men as Rockefeller, Vanderbilt and Morgan. Upon the other hand there are thirty men who favor Bryan whose aggregate wealth is about the same as those who favor McKinley, including such men as Hearst, Stewart, Jones, Newlands and Teller. Why these men by reason of their wealth should be debarred from supporting their favorites as candidates for the Presidency, I do not know, but columns of denunciation appear daily. Neither poverty nor riches, it would seem, ought to disfranchise a man, nor should an American citizen by reason of his possession of money, or failure to possess it, be prevented from ren-dering such assistance to his party as he may be able. It brings about a battle between the classes and the masses which cannot be otherwise than harmful. I am willing to admit that harmful. SENTENCED TO TWO YEARS IN FOLSOM PRISON.

Acted as Selling Agent for Stolen Merchandise — Defendant is a Young English Dish-washer, Aided the Officers. Thomas James, an Englishman, aged 24, appeared before Judge Smith yes-terday and was sentenced to two years

The defendant was charged with buying and receiving stolen goods belong-ing to W. Harris and Ed Harris. The merchandise consisted of four suits of clothes, neckwear and shirts, of a total value of $100. James has been in the United States nearly three years and has worked about hotels and restaurants. He was a dishwasher while in this city and claimed to have been the tool of the cook. He confessed to the officers and gave them information regarding the room of the man who stole the articles low attempted no evasion, and had the police been fifteen minutes earlier they would have captured the burglar; he ad become suspicious and "skipped" of more than a quarter of an hour before they entered his rooms. James said he was to have received $5 as a commission for selling the goods and had secured a purchaser at $22 for the $100 lot. This purchaser led to the arrest.

The opinion was expressed that James would be sentenced to six months in the County Jail as no former bad record was known against him, in view of the fact that he had assisted the officers in fact that he had assisted the officers in their investigations and had also pleaded guilty. It was within the pro-vince of the court to send the fellow to the penitentiary or to the County Jail, as previously stated. Judge Smith Jail, as previously stated. Judge Smith seeemed to regard James as a dangerous hanger-on about hotels and restaurants, and while appreciating his assistance to the officers, declared that the law must be respected. Had the circumstances been aggravated, the court intimated, the sentence would have been for much longer imprisonment.

Judge Smith has refused to grant Edward J. Dole a new trial. The court reviewed the evidence and authorities cited at considerable length and falled to discover any error in the proceedings; the affidavits he regarded as cumulative evidence.

In regard to Lane's testimony to the effect that he (Lane) had seen the defendant in the Turf Exchange at about 11 o'clock in the forenoon of February 11, Judge Smith said that would be a question for the jury to determine, and a different result was hardly probable in the face of the positive identification of two witnesses.

Reverting to the affidavits of Stone and Cohn, he considered the long silence of Dole as to the existence of such a man as Adams was potent within itself; an innocent man would have declared at once that he secured the check innocently and would have demanded that an instant search be made for the culprit who passed it upon him.

The court refused to grant the motion for a new trial and asked the defendant to stand up and receive sentence. Mr. Gage, Dole's attorney, answered for the latter when the court asked him if there was any reason why sentence should not be pronounced upon him. Mr. Gage objected to the whole proceeding, Judge Smith now sentenced the defendant to seven years' confinement in Folsom prison.

Before pronouncing sentence, the

More Bryan Platitudes. More Bryan Platitudes.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 15.—(To the Editor of The Times:) If the proof to the contrary was not in the peroration of Mr. Bryan's long written speech in Madison Square Garden, the other night, we would be forced to believe that he had never read the Dectart of the Constitution of the Const night, we would be forced to believe that he had never read the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, nor the writings of the fathers. For, doesn't he lug into his speech this old philosophical chestnut: "We presented to the American people the financial policy outlined in the Chicago platform, believing that it will result in the greatest good to the greatest number." Surely there is nothing in our history which teaches that "the greatest good to the greatest number" has ever been advocated, let alone approved of as being a sound United States government addectrine. On the contrary, the dictum that this government must be just to all in its acts—to the minority, be they ever so few, as well as to the majority—is too firmly rooted to be disturbed by such an emergency makeshift. If Mr. Bryan calls "the greatest good" exploded hypothesis a real Democratic doctrine, he is simply ignorant of the first principles of the creed. And he is not much of a Republican who would advocate it.

How is this for a choice ethical anthology: "Society is, therefore, interested in having the option exercised by the debtor. Indeed, there can be no such thing as real bimetallism unless the option is sexercised by the debtor."

ested in having the option exercised by the debtor. Indeed, there can be no such thing as real bimetallism unless the option is exercised by the debtor." Truly not. Any way Mr. Bryan deserves credit for plainness and frankness. The meaning is obvious. Tom loans Dick $1 in gold. Dick has the legal right to turn him something inferior or less value—a paper promise to pay, or a cent dollar. Mr. Bryan apparently asiders the ten commandrate in the forcent dollar. Mr. Bryan apparently considers the ten commandments in the light of corn-fed Cato Ingalis's iri-descent dream. It is strange to a New Forker not to read: "Just at this point Chimmie Fadden interrupted the Forker not to read: "Just at this point Chimmie Fadden interrupted the distinguished oratory thusly: 'What t'ell, what t'ell, see! are you giving us this big jolly for?' But as I quote from a Bryan organ, maybe the office cat surreptitiously made away with Chimmie's slang interpolation.

It is also passing strange that such a great man as Mr. Bryan is reputed to be could not be consistent in a type-written speech, though it took one hour and fifty minutes to unload. Early in the first hour he advocates "the greatest good" theory, but late in the fifty minutes he throws in a few old Democratic foundation rocks such as: "With a government which derives its powers from the consent of the governed, secures to all people freedom of conscience, freedom of thought, and freedom of speech, guarantees equal rights to all, and promises special privileges to none."

One is the antithesis of the other.
Though a Democrat all my life, I must pass Mr. Bryan and the hydrahead tail. Yours, R. J. BELFORD.

Beyond the limits of our minor planets our knowledge could not range. The sum of our intelligence would be vastly lessened, our conceptions of creative wisdom be most materially decreased. And thus it is in the night of man's sorrow. Then the starry hemispheres of God's love are revealed, and the vast planets of His tender mercles swing into view. There is a white, milky way which faith treads. lighted by the suns of hope, and the shining spheres of faith and trust. Brighter than the Southern Cross is the starlit cross of our redemption. The glory of Calvary lights every zone, and sheds its beams upon every night darkened by sin, if the soul-but turn toward it.

But what a farce this materialistic philosopher makes of human life. "The chemic lump arrives at the plant and grows; arrives at the quadruped and walks; arrives at man and thinks." Did heathenism ever put forth ideas more inconceivable or preforth ideas more inconceivable or pre-posterous than this? And yet it finds posterous than this? And yet it finds root in the soil of a Christian land near the year 2000 of the Christian era. It is the uplifting of a puny, finite arm that would sweep God from the throne of His own universe, annihilate mind, and the same than the brother of the and make man but the brother of the

But to the eye of the Christian faith, above all doubt and unbelief shines unhindered forever the day star of Hope. Borne upward on the unfailing wings of divine promises, above the surging seas of time, his spirit cries, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." The waters of life's ocean break for him upon no darkened shores of unbelief. Immortal vistas, where "God's own light unhindered and undarkened

Silver Has Begun to Wane.

(Peoria Transcript:) The people are all right on the tariff question, but they do need enlightenment in the matter of free silver, and the Republicans are giving it to them in a very effective manner. The free-coinage men no longer have things all their own way. The craze had already begun to wane, and it will diminish steadily from now until election time, as the sober, commonsense of the American people appreciate what is involved in the proposition and their latent honesty asserts itself. The tariff will have its full share in this campaign. Once the silver craze is checked it will be brought forward, and will play its proper part in railying the patriotic people of the country around the banner of the Republican party.

Hugher build an irrigating canal on the Colo rado River bottoms near Yuma, wher corn and barley will grow very wel with a moderate amount of water Some months ago, while Gov. Hughes (who has since been removed by the President,) was in New York, he and Senator Ives entered into a contract by which Ives was to work the labo of the penitentiary convicts for ter hours each day (Sundays excepted, for a certain sum nominated in the contract, such labor to be used in the construction of the proposed irrigating canal. Mr. Ives came out in May prepared to go ahead with the work but just about the time of his arrival, President Cleveland removed Gov. "Pinhead" Hughes and appointed Franklin in his stead. Franklin is a politician-on-the-tramp for lo! these many years, and used to make his headquarters about the Cable Grocery at Second and Spring streets while he lived here. On being shown the contract he flatly refused to be bound by the act of his predecessor regardless of the old English law motto that "the King never dies." Having gotten the merits of the case some days ago from a gentleman of Yuma, now in this city, it was not necessary to ask Mr. Ives many questions about the case.

"How's your ditch embargo getting along, Senator?" I asked.

"Well, you know as much about it as I do," replied Mr. Franklin, Governor of Arizona, to turn over the convict labor of the penitentiary inmates. The suit was in the nature of a writ of mandamus, and the judge took the case under advisement. And as it Englishman said, when the stage coach upset and he was dumped into the mud, 'You don't know where you are, and there you are!"

"But that was several weeks ago—has there been nothing done about it since I met you here in June?" asked the Trespasser.

"Not a thing, my dear boy. We do things very differently in New York. The writ would either have been granted or denied there within forty-eight hours, or sixty at the most. But this is a curious country, and the Arizona court is like the peace of God—it passeth all understanding."

Arizona court is like the peace of God—it passeth all understanding."

W. A. Selkirk, who was known in the 50s as "the Missouri abolitionist," shook my hand in front of the Hollenbeck yesterday afternoon. He went over to the Democracy in 1875, when his friend William Irwin was nominated for Governor. In 1894 he and Joseph Levison (for many years city editor of the Portland Oregonian,) published the San Bernardino Sun. Selkirk looks very well, and has been visiting friends in the land of San Berdoo for the past week. In reply to my question as to whether he was about to start up any new journalistic enterprise, he said:

"Well, if I do, I won't start up anywhere within seventy-five miles of this place."

"Why not?" I asked.

"Because The Times has every foot of the ground already covered, and no country paper can make any more than hard tack and coffee around here. You pick up a San Francisco daily paper and there's a page about Oakland and Alameda, and sometimes about six inches about Sausalito; but nothing else in the way of country news do you see in those papers. But in The Times there is daily correspondence from Pasadena, Monrovia Santa Monica, Redondo, Pomona, and every other town around here for fifty miles. And if you don't see any letters in The Times from any town hereabouts its because there's nothing going on there, and the circus leaves it off to one side, like the man in the Bible who passed on to Shun'em. Well, you'll have to excuse me, my boy; I've got to catch the 4 o'clock train for the land of San Berdoo. So long."

Are we ever going to have another park in the vicinity of Pico Heights? That part of the city has the best water, the purest air and as good soil as can be found at any part of the country. I look to see some elegant houses erected there before long, and a great improvement in the street railway service as well. But as that will depend upon a general shuffling up of the City Council and a new deal all around, it becomes what Rudyard Kipling calls "another story."

AN UNKNOWN PEOPLE

Or. Bastian Starts for Centra

Asia to Study the Miao-Tse.

No White Man Ever Returned from This Country Alive,

Mimost Obliterated Traces of a Civilization Strongly Suggesting That of Europe Among a People Who are not Mongoilans.

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.)

Of all the strange people on the face of the earth there are none more interesting or less known about than the Miao-Tse. No white man, so far as is known, has ever penetrated their domain. Certainly none have come back allve to tell of their adventures, for certain clans of the Miao-Tse are pornounced in their cannibalistic tendencies toward their enemies and consider every stranger an enemy.

Although the Miao-Tse anation only occupies a territory some 400 miles

processions long periods of mourning and entomb their dead in stone graves. Other tribes resort to the primitive methods of placing their dead in baskets in trees, a custom which would show that there must be some affinity between these overlooked denizers of Central Asia, and our western Aborigines. There is one curious funeral custom, however, that is universally observed all over the land of the Miao-Tree. Whentver a married man dies it's the propert thing to delay the funeral rites until the widow can remarry. Otherwise it is known as "a funeral without a master," and that is considered a crowning disgrace, as it reflects upon the widow as a destrable spouse. However, if she remarries within a few hours after her husband's death it stamps her at once as one of the Miao-Tse. "400," and a leader of society. Old maids are almost unknown. When by any chance a maid passes her youthful days without securing a husband, there is only one thing left for her to do if she would escape complete contumely and absolute degradation and want. That is to fiee to one of the outlying clans where polygamy exists, and attach herself to some train of concubines. Nevertheless polygamy is by no means popular among the people, and is simply countenanced as a safeguard against the so-called social evil, which, by the way, does not exist at: all, and as a resort for superfluous females. Children born to a polygamous wife are not recognized as heirs in any sense to the male parent's estate or his name, Names, though, count for nothing. There are no family names handed down. Each man is known by some peculiarity of his personal appearance, trait of mind or experience. His wife and daughters take their name from him. Were there a society paper published in Miao-Thea wedding announcement would read something like this:
"The wife of Small Legs announces the marriage of her daughter No. 4 to Mr. Pig Killer, the son of Mr. Squeaky Voice."

There is another peculiar burial pustom which even the Chinese students with their vivid imaginations

The write of Small Legs announces the marriage of her daughter No. 4 of Mr. Pig Killer, the son of Mr. Squesky

These rugged fastnesses have been the main defense of the Miso-Tse against their would-be Chinese conquerors, who have time and again sent vast armies to subdue them, only to meet overwhelming defeat. Many a mandrian general has lost his head for these failures. Only twenty years ago a Chinese army of 100,000 troops was utterly annihilated by less than 30,000 Miso-Tse soldiers.

They have nothing whatever in common with their pig-tailed neighbors and look down upon them with undisguised contempt. They are much taller and darker skinned. Their features are sharp and their eyes set straight like a Caucasian's. In battle they show the fanatical bravery of a savage. Their origin is veiled in the mystery of legendry. Many theories have been advanced and many works written by the Chinese on the subject, but none of them bear the stamp of authenticity. A favorite explanation is that they are the descendants of 600 soldiers left in the mountains by a certain Gen. Ma, some 500 years ago, on his return to the north after a victorious campaign in India. The fact that they are not or never could havt been Chinese as a shadow of doubt upon it. In all probability they are the remnants of the once great Lao nation that long before the Christian era lorded it all over Central Asia. That they were once in a comparatively high state of civilization the contraction there is abudent roof.

once great Jan hatton that long before the Christian era lorded it all over Central Asia. That they were once in a comparatively high state of civilization there is abundant proof. As, for instance, they still have a number of very old parchment manuscripts and books which the Chinese positively assert none of the present Miao-Tse can read. The characters are described as retsembling "twisted worms, and utterly unintelligible." In all the clans records of events, messages and accounts one man kept by notching sticks, Although there never appears to have been any civil war or serious discord among the Miao-Tse, there is a most ornonunced contrast in the manner of life of the various classes. Some of them still retain traces of that ancient civilization which has so nearly, become obliterated, and use mechanical devices and iron and steel implements that are far and away ahead of anything that tht Mongolians ever had, while other clans in close proximity have retrograded to the depths of barbarshim.

the "courade."

What little religion there is confined to bull worship and the sacrifice of white bulls to the memory of ancestors. There is also a semi-religious rite of dismissing the devil from a lad, for which a straw goat is made, carried through the streets and subsequently set on fire by the boy.

The government is purely patriarchial, the old men administering the atfairs of each clan, much as it was once done in Scotland, without the slightest attention being paid to the Peking government. This is the more remarkable, as the Chinese Empire surrounds the land of the Miao-Tse on all sides.

Despite their semi-barbarous condi-

all sides.

Despite their semi-barbarous condition, the people hold old age and their women in great reverence. The women hardly deserve the respect shown them, for they are pretty generally given over to looking upon and consuming large quantities of wine when it is red and lying promiscuously around on the hillsides to sleep. They are not over-modest in their attire, either, which consists of a jacket, open in front, and a skirt reaching to the knees, without trousers or any other garment.

There is one trait about the women.

In some sections cannibalism is openly practice on all enemies with the idea that by eating the body the soul is also destroyed. This belief, Dr. Bastian says, is held by no other cannibals in the world except the natives of New Zealand. which consists of a jacket, open in front, and a skirt reaching to the knees, without trousers or any other garment.

There is one trait about the wome that should commend them every where. Although they are passionate fond of strong drink they are equal passionate in their fondness for cowater, applied externally. They are The contrast in burial customs is just as great. The "Blacks," the most civilized, and regarded as the leaders of the nation, spend a great deal of money upon funerals, with elaborate clean. No more would they pass a day without bathing than without breathing. The Chinese, who have little to say in favor of the Miao-Tse, admit that even in the height of winter the women bathe daily in the cold mountain streams.

They have no jalls, no paupers and few criminals. If a man falls to pay his debts or cheats, the aggrieved party promptly goes and digs up the bones of his adversary's ancestors and holds them as security until the debt is paid or the wrong righted. Then he reburys them. This is a more serious affair to a Miao-Tse than we can easily comprehend, as it deprives him of all standing in the community, as well as all self-respect, for there is the custom every year to dig up an ancestor's bones, and wash them. If he neglects it or can't do it he is a blot on the nation.

Of course they are superstitious. To forstell events they manipulate bits of grass in some fantastic way. Spears of grass also figure prominently in their games.

The clans on the borderland have been wont to make predatory excursions in the Chinese empire and help themselves to anything they found lying around loose. To prevent this the government has recently established strong garrisons at frequent intervals all around Miao-Tse land to protect the chicken-hearted Chinamen who live in the adjacent villages and farms. Occasionally a band of Miao-Tse band farms. Occasionally a band of Miao-Tse is an absolutely unknown quantity. It probably foots up to a million souts, perhaps much more, for the territory is all inhabited and some of the villages are very large. The name Miao-Tse applies to the whole race. Sometimes it is spelled Miautze. There are four divisions or tribes in the nation. These are known respectively as the "Blacks," the "Stirrups," the "Blacks," the "Stirrups," the "Blacks," the "Stirrups," the "Blacks," the "Stirrups," the "Blacks," and the "Kamboosa." These four tribes are again subdivided into some forty clans. Should Dr. Bastian succeed in opening the way for civilization and commerce to this people it

It was light brown and his complexion was also florid, with clear blue eyes and heavy eye lashes. He was of medium height, rather siender, and walked with a gait that suggested humility; it might be called a listening attitude. It has been said that Webster was intemperate, and that he used to drink heavily on the proceeds of his songs. I never saw him under the influence of licuor,

Ann Arbor University, named Samuel Fillmore Bennett, became an intimate friend of Webster. They were in fact almost inseparable. One day Webster came into his office in a most despondent frame of mind, a mood that had become most common to him at that time. But on this day he was downeast to a degree that aroused the anxiety of his friend, who exclafmed: "What is the trouble now?"

Webster answered with a sigh, "It is no matter, it will be all right bye and bye."

Like an inspiration the idea flashed upon Bennett, who had written a num-

He went out to the office and presently Mr. Healy called to me to give Mr. Whittemore a copy of the song. Nothing more was thought of the matter, till nearly a year afterward, when we began to have calls for the "Sweet Bye and Bye." I remember my surprise the first time it was asked for. A little schoolgirl not more than 12 or 15 years of age, came in very timidity, being evidently unused to trading "by herself," and standing off from the counter as though afraid to come nearer, said: "Have you a plece of music called "The Sweet Bye and Bye?" "It's in Mr. Whittemore's book."

It is thus fair to state that to Mr.

Healy's tender nature and to Mr. Whitemore's recognition of the merits of the song. the world owes its knowledge of Webster's inspiration.

Mr. Healy's and my own utter failure to see anything in it is only another instance of how human judgment errs, and this was, in my own case, most keenly emphasized when after having spent four years abroad studying. I returned to be greeted in New York on the ferry boats, steamboats and railway trains with the strains of "Swet Bye and Bye."

The last time I saw Webster was in Milwaukee in the sumer of 1877 at Hémpstead's music store. He was then an invalid, the almost continual coughing betraying the serious nature of the dread disease. He asked me to play for him, as I had done when a boy, varitions on his beautiful song "Lorena," written by Louis Staabs. This I did to his intense delight, and most effusive thanks. Then I gave him an improvisation on the "Sweet Bye and Bye," which I had recently played in concerts. At the conclusion, when I turned about on the plano stool I found Webster crying coplously, and yet there was a smile upon his lips, as he exclaimed: "You have made me the happlest man in the world. I feel I have not lived in vain."

He wrung my hand in silence, and begged me to play it once more, for he said. "You know, Slias, I may never hear you play again," I felt his words were true, and repeated it with all the fervor at my command, adding afterward an impromptu arrangement of "Then You'll Remember Me." With this I said good-by hurriedly and hastily left the store, for the demonstration of his appreciation had become so effusive that I felt most uncomfortably embarrassed. Webster was one of nature's noblemen: tender-hearted, true, simple-minded and honest. Musie was to him the ready medium of pouring out his longings his sorrows and aspirations, and who shall say that the offerings of this great soul expressed in such an artiess manner, are not just as acceptable upon the altar of his God, as those more elaborate works where art embellishes and frequently ster's popularity had greatly waned and had been overshadowed by the enormous success of George F. Root's war songs. Thus the composer of "Little Maude" and "Lorena" was no longer sought for and little attention given him.

After Webster had gone Mr. Healey turned the manuscript of the song over to me, and I played it and hummed it with perfect indifference, not to say contempt, for its simplicity offended the little knowledge I had acquired by studying Johnson's "Harmony and Thoroughbase."

Mr. Healey said, with a sort of sigh, "Oh, yes! we'll have to get it out," and then added, "Poor fellow! I didn't have the heart to send him away without taking it."

So we got the song out with the least expense possible, the cheapest little page we could get made, and the lettering so bad that we all felt ashamed to show it. I placed it upon the counter, and there it was permitted to lie, friendless, for I never recommended it—and apparently feeling its poverty and insignificance in comparison with the gorgeous lithograph title pages and elegantly-colored lettering of the other sheet-music by which it was surrounded, finally without selling a dozen copies, it was consigned to the oblivion of the wholesale shelves, where Mr. Healey and myself mentally erected a tombstone inscribed "sacred to the memory of a poor musician." Hard to beat, so hard, in fact, that it can't be done at all or anywhere. What? Why, Desmond's stock of summer hats, shirts, neckwear, hosiery, suspenders, collars, cuffs, etc., etc. That's as plain as a flat surface. The goods need no puffing. They stand on their own quality, and not on prices. To put it exactly, Desmond's figures have shown a woolen quality and shrunk badly. Values haven't withered, though; they're all at Desmond's, No. 141 South Spring street, and money will do wonders now. It's no use waiting when you see this. All straw hats formerly sold at $1.25 now 50 cents each; all 25-cent neckwear now three for 50 cents; Al stiff and soft hats, latest styles, $2 and $2.50, etc., etc.

landing." On the reverse was a ship under sail, firing a gun. In 1645 the Assembly of Virginia, owing to the "great wants and miseries which do daily happen unto it by the sole de-pendence upon tobacco," provided for a copper coinage, but the law was not carried into effect: In 1631 Massachu-setts used corn as a legal tender at market prices, and in 1634 "muskett bulletts of a full boarde" passed cur-rent for "a farthing aplece," provided no man was compelled "to take above Xid att a tyme in them." The earliest coionial colinage took place in Massachusetts in 1752, when "a mint-howse" was established at Boston, and coins of the value of threepence, sixpence and twelvepence were struck. These coins were to be of the fineness of "new sterling English money," and every shilling was "to weigh a 3 penny troy weight, and lesser pleece proportionably." They were stamped on one side with N. E., and on the other with IIId VId. XIId, "according to the value of cash price." They were soon after incirculation, but owing to the excessive plainness of their finish they were found to be greatly exposed to "washing and clipping." To remedy this, in the same year a new die was ordered that required that "henceforth both shillings and smaller pieces shall have a double ring on either side, with the inscription (Massachusetts) and a tree in the center, on the one side, and New look and the lords proper to the chart of the content of th lonial coinage took place in Massa chusetts in 1752, when "a mint-howse" was established at Boston, and coins of the value of threepence, sixpence and

The earliest American coinage was executed in 1612, for the Virginia Company, at Sommer Islands, now called Bermudas. The coin was of brass, and bore on the obverse the words "Sommer Islands," and "a hogge on one side, in memory of the abundance of side, in memory of the abundance of hogges which were found on their first landing." On the reverse was a ship landing." On the reverse was a ship and the state of the stat a female figure holding an olive branch with the legend, "Inde et Lib., 1785." The mint continued in operation three years. New Jersey authorized a copper coinage in 1786. The persons procuring the patent established two mints, one the patent established two mints, one at a place known as Solitude, about two miles west of Morristown, and the other at Elizabeth. The coins are described thus: Obverse, a horse's head with a plow beneath: legend, "Nova Caesaera, 1786," etc.: reyerse, a shield; legend, "E. Pluribus Unum." Massachusetts, in 1786, directed the establishment of a mint, and the following year the necessary works were erected on the necessary works were erected on Boston Neck and at Dedham. In 1788

Below the dial were the words "Mind your business." A few of these pieces are said to have been struck at the Rupert, Vt., mint. This piece was coined by contract, and was the only legal colorage of the United States copper coins until 1793, except the experimental pieces of three varieties coined in 1791, and called the Washington cent. Various curious pieces were also brought out, among which may be mentioned several varieties and with different designs, in copper principally, called Washington permies and Washington pieces. Pennsylvania made no attempt to coin money.

The resolution of Congress of October 16, 1786, directing that the law of February, 1782, should be carried into effect for establishing a mint, was not carried into execution owing to the difficulty experienced in procuring die makers and coining presses from England. On the 3rd of March, 1791, Congress passed a resolution authorizing the President to establish a mint and on the 2d of April, 1792, it passed a code of laws for the establishment and regulation of the mint. The coins were to be of gold, silver and copper, as provided for by the act of 1786; Washington selected David Rittenhouse, the astronomer, for the director, and Henry Voight, watchmaker, as an assistant of John Fith in the manufacture of the machinery of his first steamer, was made chief coiner. Triston Dalton was treasurer, and in the following year Albion Cox was appointed chief of assayers, and Robert Scott engraver. The mint building was secured in the, same year, on the east side of Seventh street, above what is now known as Filbert street, in the then capital of the country—Philadelphia.

and were put in operation about the 1st of October. Washington, in his message to Congress, November 6, 1792, said: "There has been a small beginning in the coinage of half-dimes, the want of small coins in circulation calling the first attention to them."

Before Congress passed the code of laws for the regulation of the mint, artists were engaged in getting up dies. John Harper, a saw-maker of Philadelphia, caused dies to be engraved under the direction of Robert Birch, and from these dies most of the Washington cents were probably struck in his cellar from the colning presses which were stored there. The coins of 1792 were struck in an old coach shop. The idea of placing the effigy of a public man upon the coin of the country met the decided disapprobation of Washington himself, and he caused the dies to be destroyed. In 1782 before the mint was ready to go into operation, Gen. Washington deposited one hundred dollars in silver bullion, which was coined, at his request, into half-dimes or "dismes," as they were called was coined, at his request, into half-dimes, or "dismes," as they were called at that time. These coins were not intended for circulation as currency, and they were distributed by the general among his friends in this country and Europe. These "disn Mr. Harper's cellar. When the mint was ready there were coined there in 1792, the dime and half-dime and the cent. The silver dollar and half-dollar were coined in 1794, and gold eagles and half-eagles in 1795. In 1793, '94 and '95 the total amount of gold coined was $71.485. In 1796 it was $102,-727.50. The official records of the mint show that from 1773 to 1805, inclusive, there were coined of silver dollars $1,-439,517, and that no further coinage of silver dollars was had until 1836; that in 1836, $1000 were coined; that there was no coinage of silver dollars was had until 1837 or in 1838; that in 1839 but 300 silver dollars were coined; and that the total coinage of silver dollars until the unlimited coinage of silver dollars until the unlimited coinage of silver dollars was withdrawn in 1873, was something over $8,000,000. The total coinage of silver dollars from the organization of the United States mint in 1792 to 1894, inclusive, has been 430,457,987 silver dollars; and the total silver coinage, including dollars, for the same period, $681,099,619,15; total gold coinage, $1,732,552,223, and nickel, copper and bronze coinage, $26,481,531.79. By the act of 1792, it was ordered that the larger coins should bear the figure of the head of liberty on one side, and the figure of an eagle—the national emblem—on the other. The selection of quarters in proportion. Their fineness was also changed to 899-1000ths; the weight and fineness of the silver coins remained unchanged—the dollar being 416 grains, fineness 892.4; half-dollar weight 208 grains, fineness 892.4; half-dollar piece, coined by a New York blacksmith named Ephram Brasher. It was there put "Unum E. Pluribus." Only five of these pieces are known to be extant, and they are very valuation with the same of "Old Bullion." Notwithstanding there was an increased coinage of silver, the public demand for a further increase was so great that Congress in this year (1834) passed an act making the "Golfar of Mexico, Peru, Chile, and Central America" of a given weight and certain fine grains and the proposed on gold coins in 1798, and on silver coins in 1798, and on silver coins in 1798. It was constantly used thereafter until 1831, when it was withdrawn from the quarter-dollar of new gold coins to mark the change in the standard fineness of the coin. In 1837 it was dropped from the silver coins, marking the era of the revised mint countries. The introduction of the small Spanish coins caused the reign of the "fips" and "levies" of our early days. The fip represented the one-sixteenth of a dollar, the levy one-eighth of a dollar.

On January 18, 1837, the French standard of fineness—900—was adopted

On January 18, 1837, the French standard of fineness—900—was adopted for both gold and silver coins. The weight of the gold coins remained unchanged, while that of the silver dollar was reduced to 412.5 grains—parts in proportion. On February 12, 1873, this coinage was discontinued, the total coinage was discontinued, the total amount coined being $8,045,838.

The trade dollars were authorized February 12, 1873, the weight being 420 grains, fineness 900 and "not a legal tender." Their coinage began in 1874 and suspended February 22, 1878, after coining $35,965,964. The new pattern of standard silver dollars was authorized February 28, 1878, and has continued until the present time. The silver twenty-cent piece was authorized to be coined March 3, 1875, weight 5 grains, or 77.1 grains, fineness .900. It was discontinued May 2, 1878, after $271,000 were coined.

On March 3, 1849, the double eagle, or twenty-dollar piece, and the dollar were added to the series of gold coins, and February 21, 1853, the three-colar piece. THE PREFERENCE FOR GOLD.

No matter how much silver may be in use, it is an incontestable fact that it. In use, it is an incontestable fact that it gets its value by comparison with gold. It is no use to say that this should not be so. The fact that it is so is grounded in human nature. This brings us to the second point with which we started, namely, that when limited to a choice of the two metals, the human race has always inclined to gold. This predisposition has come to be so marked that the price of every commodity is measured in gold, silver being no exception. Among thinking people gold always has the preference of silver. If one of the metals must be discarded from circulation it should be silver. In his last annual report the director of the mint says that "the real demonetization of silver in the United States took place in 1853," and he quotes Prof. Laughlin as saying: "It was in 1853 that Congress, judging "It was in 1853 that Congress, judging in 1853," and he quotes Prof. Laughlin as saying:

"It was in 1853 that Congress, judging from our past experience and that of other countries, came to the conclusion that a double standard was an impossibility for any length of time.

"It cannot be said, however, that this conclusion was reached wholly through unselfish reasons. The underlying prejudice in favor of gold, if gold can be had, which we are sure to find deeply seated in the desires of our business community whenever occasion gives it seated in the desires of our business community whenever occasion gives it an opportunity for display, was here manifesting itself. The country found itself with a single metal in circulation. Had that metal been silver, we should have had to chronicle again the grum-bling dissertations on the disappearance of gold which characterized the period preceding 1834. In 1853 the single stand-ard was gold. This was a situation ard was gold. This was a situation which no one rebelled against. Indeed, no one seemed to regard it as anything else than good fortune (except so far as the subsidiary coins had disappeared It was very much as if a ranchman, the subsidiary coins had disappeared. It was very much as if a ranchman, starting with 100 good cattle and 100 inferior ones, had found, when branding time came, that, by virtue of exchange with his neighbors, the 200 cattle assigned to him were, in his judgment, all good ones and none inferior. From a selfish point of view he had no reason to complain. It wauld have been a very different story had the 200 cattle all been inferior.

"In the debate it was proposed that, "In the debate it was proposed that, as the cause of the change in the relative values of gold and silver was the increased product of gold, the proper remedy should be to increase the quantity of gold in the gold coins. This was exeactly the kind of treatment which should have been adopted in regard to silver in 1834, and it seems quite reasonable that this should have been the only true and just policy in 1853. Certainly it was, if it was intended to bring the mint ratio into accord with the market ratio and try again the experiment of a double

In this operation the paper is puiled off a drum by two long "fingers," which come up from below, and another finger dips in a vat of mucilage and applies itself to the wrapping paper in exactly the right spot. Other parts of the machine twine the paper around the pack of cards, and then a "thumb" presses over the spot where the mucilage is, and the package is thrown upon a carry belt ready for delivery. (Harper's Weekly:) The negroes of New Orleans, who number 75,000, or about one-fourth of the whole population, have filed petitions with the several railroads to provide them with some park or picnic grounds, where they can go of an evening. The public parks are legally open to them, but the race prejudice is so strong that very few venture to go there. For the past few years Spanish Fort, where Gen. Jackson entered New Orleans, has been their chief resort; but this summer it was thrown open to the whites, and consequently closed to colored people. "Little Woods" has followed sult, and the negroes have nowhere to go. They point out that even in slavery days they had their special park set apart for them by the whites, and which still bears the name of "Congo Square." It has been rechristened Place des Armes and Beauregard Place, but all in vain. It is still "Congo Square." in spite of all the city ordinances, and the fact that the Congo negroes were crowded out a half century ago. (Eli Perkins's book on Coinage:) In California, a gold mining State, where $12,000,000 worth of gold, and only $607.-000 worth of silver, was mined in 1893 (Mint Report, page 51.) I found many miners opposed to free coinage.

"Why do you oppose it?" I asked Harrison Ogden, a rich gold miner. "Because," he said, as he took out his I've made my fortune but want to leave a valuable business and a prosperous country to my children when I die. A benefit to the silver mine-owner don't help gold. I am no more interested in the silver mine-owner than the cotton-planter or wheat farmer.

"In fact," continued Mr. Ogden, blowing out another long whiff of smoke, "if the silver miner can take 50 cents' worth of silver to the mint and sell it for a dollar, as good as gold, where will the gold miner be? If the government should pay double the market price for corn, where would the wheat

"Why do you say you would stop gold mining?" I asked.

"Because silver mining would pay better than gold mining. They are getting out silver now very cheaply. It pays to mine 50-cent silver, and 100-cent silver would be a bonanza. It costs a dollar on an average to mine a dollar in gold. It costs 50 cents on an average to mine 50 cents' worth of commercial silver. When the government takes that 50 cents' worth of silver and gives a dollar for it in gold, who would mine gold?"

"So you see," said Mr. Ogden, "we mined twice as much silver in 1893 as gold, putting the silver at its coining value."

What do you mean by 'coining value?""

been larged than the gold product?" I asked.
"Yes. The silver mined in the whole world in 1883, if coined, would be worth $209,165,000, and there was mined only $157,228,000 worth of gold. Mr. Preston, the director of our mint, says 'the low price of silver has not diminished the silver supply, and if the price should be doubled—lifted by free coinage to 16 to 1, instead of 32 to 1, silver would pour forth from the mines in such quantities that it would be impossible for any single nation to coin it."
"Here are the silver statistics of the whole world," said Mr. Ogden, holding up the mint report of 1894. "Coin garbies these statistics. Here you will see how the world's increase in the production of silver from 1873 to 1893 went, from $81,800,000 in 1833, to $209,165,000 in 1893."

Did they take it?

No; the people only use, on an average, 70 cents each. We could only get $56,000,000 worth of silver (page 23, Mint Report '94) out of the $625,300,000 into circulation, and $508,000,000 lies dead in the treasury.

But do the people circulate the gold? you ask.

Of course they do. There is $7 in gold in circulation per capits in the United States today—and 70 cents in silver!

No, we don't need any more coined silver at present. When we do need it

Coin doesn't give these statistics in his book. He says silver is the money of the poor. He is afraid to say that the silver mines are owned by millionalires and rich syndicates, who would ruin the poor with debauched money and make them ashamed of a country that would borrow good money and pay it back in truck. He has a honey argument, but it always ends in the vinegar of repudiation. His arguments end a good deal like the argument of the staunch old Tennessee Baptist.

arguments end a good deal like the argument of the staunch old Tennessee Baptist.

This good old clergyman wanted to illustrate the three sects, Methodiats, Episcopalians and hard-shell Baptists. So he took a chestnut into the pulpit one day, and, holding it up to the congregation, began:

"My friends, you see this chestnut; well, this outer burr here is like the Methodists, soft and spongy, with no strength into it; see, I even mash it with my fingers," and suiting the action to the words, he sloughed it off and disclosed the inner nut, and said:

"This inner nut is like the Episcopallans, smooth and dry and velvety, with no substance in it.

"But the kurnel—the kurnel, my Christian friends—is like our good old primitive, hard-shell Baptist faith, full of fatness and sweetness."

He then proceeded to give his hearers an ocular demonstration of his illustration, by crunching the chestnut between his teeth—and at the same time blowing the moldy meat all over the pulpit, and exclaiming, to the astonishment of everybody:

"By Jinks! it's rotten."

Value of Bees to Apricot Growers Dr. E. Gallup of Santa Ana writes to the Bee Journal a strong plea for bees in the orchard. This season has been a very peculiar one for California. Our apricots usually bear full crops every other year, and this should have been the bearing year; but, owing to the unusually cool dry weather while they apricots usually bear full crops every other year, and this should have been the bearing year; but, owing to the unusually cool, dry weather while they were in bloom, the crop is extremely light in many places, and in some localities almost a failure. Now, this could have been remedied. How? Why, by, having bees to fertilize the bloom.

This article is suggested by the complaint of a friend. He had a large colony of bees take possession of the roof of his tank-house some time in April, and now he is in a sweat as to how to get rid of them, as he says they are a terrible nuisance on the apricots while drying, especially overripe ones, is a fact which I am not going to deny. Now this friend has a very light crop of apricots, and is very anxlous to make the most of them, and. I want to whisper in his ear a trifle:

Friend S., providing you had four or six colonies of bees to fertilize your apricots while in bloom, you would have had a heavy crop; and, knowing that the bees were the cause of the heavy crop, could you have begrudged them the small quantity of juice they would have taken while they were drying? You discover the bees on the drying trays, and do you not imagine that they are doing a great sight more harm than they really are? You are a pretty close observer in most cases; please look into this matter thoroughly.

Now for facts: At the time the trees were in bloom, it was so cool that bees could fly but a short distance from their hives, and only a few hours in the day. I notice some twenty trees on First street literally loaded with nice fruit, while a short distance from them the trees are almost bare of fruit. There is a cause for this, and what is that cause? Why, there are two large colonles of bees in the cornice of a house adjoining the lots where those trees are. I met a friend three days ago; he was making preparations for apricot drying. "Well, how is your crop," I asked. "I never had a heavier crop, or a finer one; and as my neighbors have only very light crops, and some of them almost none a

Briggs at once begun the work of development, and indications point to some rich deposits in the ledge. Besides free gold, a cinnabar vein two feet in diameter has been struck. The captain says he is perfectly satisfied to let the other fellows make the money; he has a pretty good outlook for the yellow metal himself.

THE ONLY CURE

FOR THAT AWFUL DISEASE, CONSUMPTION.

The Koch Medical Institute Bfeed Cures Where All Others Fail, by the Use of Their "Improved Tuberculin."

Cures Where All Others Fall, by the Use of Their "Improved Tuberculin."

Every one knows that consumption is considered incurable. The best physicians of the country do nothing more than to dope the patient with creosote, cod liver oil, etc., and order a change of elimate. Neither the patient nor the physician recognizes the existence of consumption until well advanced, or if they do recognize it, they do not confess it until such a degree of progress has been reached by the disease as to made it apparent to the ordinary observer, and then it is admitted to exist, but announced at the same time that there is no further help.

When it was announced by Drs. Ballard and Whitman a few weeks ago that they were curing consumption, with their new improved tuberculin, a great deal of jealousy was immediately excited, and untiring efforts have been made by the profession since to make light of the "improved tuberculin" treatment and the doctors who use it. Considerable discussion has been provoked consequently, as to the merits of their "improved tuberculin", and their method of using it, and many false statements have been made as to the source of the tuberculin used at the Koch Medical Institute.

It is needless to say these false statements

the tuberculin used at the Koch Medical Institute.

It is needless to say these false statements and the ridicule of the treatment are all made under cover, where no opportunity exists for a fair contradiction or for an explanation in the same manner as any coward would take to stab his foe in the back.

The men using the "improved tuberculin" at the Koch Medical Institute are men of veracity and reputation, and they are prepared to prove every assertion they make concerning their cures and their treatment.

The improved tuberculin which they use in their remedy is manufactured in Berlin by the German government, under the supervision of Prof. Robert Koch, and is imported direct by them. It is not the cheap tuberculin made in this country, nor any of the cheap modifications now in the market and used with such deleterious effects by many physicians. They prepare their remedy from "improved tuberculin."

The remedy as prepared and used by the Koch Medical Institute is superior to any of the so-called modifications of tuberculin, or any of the serums manufactured in this country, and stands without any equal in the treatment of consumption.

"Improved tuberculin" is not like some of To remove all the toxines would be to destroy.

Its therapeutic value, and it would be like laudanum with the morphine removed. It is the toxic principle which destroys the bacilli, and on its presence depends the value of the remedy. "Improved tuberculin" retains the remedy. "Improved tuberculin" retains the full curative power of the tuberculine, but is combined with other remedies, which assist in the work of destroying the bacilli and re-moving them from the system, and at the same time render it impossible to harm the patient time render it impossible to harm the patient when it is properly used.

The patients now being treated at the Koch Medical Institute are proofs of its curative power, as well as its harmlessness. No one has yet been harmed or injured, and no one has taken the first month's treatment who has not been benefited and continued the treatment.

More patients suffering from consumption have been cured in Los Angeles by the "improved tuberculin" treatment at the Koch Medical Institute during the last three months than by all other treatments and remedies combined during the same number of years. Nothing is claimed but facts, and proofs can be produced to verify the statements made. Nothing is claimed but facts, and proofs can be produced to verify the statements made. AMERICANS' ENGLISH WAYS.

I told Willie that nobody would call their places by these names because they are American, and the average American likes to name his country place after some castle built and inhabited by an Englishman. In the next town to us, and to which I am driving, there is a fancy for adding villa to the name, and so there are all sorts of colored villas, and villas with people's names before them, and villas with nonsensical descriptions ahead of them, while in reality they are nothing but small cottages submerged under big titles. One man has named his place "Gotham;" I suppose he thought it sounded big, but as he made his money in tinned meats, all the small boys in the neighborhood call it "got ham!" As Willie knows everybody around here, he has 'cold me the history of the people as he has pointed out the houses. She ate molasses on fish and Worcester sauce on pie. I thought he was not telling me the truth, but as Willie lacks humor altogether, he was simply stating a fact.

What a lot of queer people there are! Willie forced me to study one family—the Dashers. A long time ago they were rich; now they are poor; but they float along on the wave of society, and nobody knows just how they support themselves. They have this little cottage in the country, and in the winter they are all in town visiting the many friends courageous enough to invite them. The mother is a popular nuisance. That sounds like a contradiction. Early in poverty she made up her mind that to be eccentric would be decidedly advantageous, so she is slovenly in her dress, greedy as far as feeding is concerned, pushing, from a social standpoint, and with sufficient courage (it might be called cheek) to go where she is not invited, with a perfect certainty that she will be excused because she is "so odd." Society ought not to permit

The third daughter does nothing, and for this the world is very thankful—the daughter does nothing, and for this the world anythical establishment. The trid daughter does nothing, and for this the world is very thankful—the daughter does nothing, and for this the world as the pretition of supplied that is the pretition. The find fault with them for the absolutely dishonorable way that they go about it. Today nobody thinks an the Indian language, and seek for names that have meaning, and that are not silly? This is not my suggestion, but Willie's. He said, "Why not name some place Tona," which means hunter's rest? Or, why not call a house that is surrounded by a park, in which means leaping water? Or another, 'Ossego,' which means Fair View? Or another, built of stone and on a high mountain, "Tarlo,' which is beautiful rock?"

AMERICANS' ENGLISH WAYS.
I told Willie that nobody would call their places by these names because they are American, and the average American likes to name his country place after some castle built and inhabited by an Englishman. In the next town to us, and to which I am driving, there is a fancy for adding villa to the name, and so there are all sorts of colored villas, and villas with people's names before them, and colors must be very costly.

Canners are in the market for all the cling peaches they can get at good prices. They say they can not get anywhere's near the quantity they will use in this locality. To every ton of clings produced here, there are four tons of frees, and so, since the canner's trade calls for four tons of clings to one of frees, he must look outside for his pack in this line. Taking a cue from our observations this week, we believe the orchardist had best prepare to dry his Crawford peaches. . . . In pears the difficulty lies with quality. The crop is fairly good, but not of the best grade. Last year we had only a few Bartletts, but they were fine and brought good prices. Undoubtedly the greater portion of this fruit will be put in tin, although the grower will have to be satisfied with a low price or dry. . . Canners are not going to speculate this season. Times are too hard and money too scarce. They will pack up to or perhaps a little beyond their present orders, but not in any large way. Money is more valuable than canned goods these days."

Rural Houses and the Naming of Them.

AT A PACE THAT WAS EASY, kicked up no dust, made no noise, gave passers-by the impression that I was driving, while really the horse was pulling the wagon and regulating the speed to suit himself. I think this is the kind of horse I like. I now know that if I set up a trap in the city, the best sort of horse for me to buy would be one that in his early days was attached to a cross-town car. In time he could be fattened, made to look sleek and well, and then attached to my vehicle. We might hide the bell under the seat and ring it when we wished him to stop.

There is one good thing about driving a week's vacation and spending in a hardware store, and burning in a sheep in the country—you get a course, either becoming a very rich man or starving. There is no happy medium in medicine, which means, of course, either becoming a very rich man or starving. There is no happy medium in medicine. Willie, however, is likely to succeed. He has the first reoulsite toward being a good doctor. He is intensely sympathetic with women, and sees nothing funny in anything they do. The consequence is that he was willing to undertake teaching me how to drive. At first, when I saw the horse I was to control, I feared that his opinion and mine would differ in regard to speed. He was an animal with a curious eye. Framed in white, it seemed to flicker about in an unsteady sort of way, and looking into the future, I imagined him salling through the village controlling the point of the cottage, and had maple syrup for breakfast. I do not see why this many of the establishment of the establishment as the first increased, unless it is that the reging while Willie and I were dashed an unsteady sort of way, and looking into the future, I imagined him sail-ing through the village controlling the reins, while Willie and I were dashed out and had our brains spilled. But things never turn out as I expect colored genaleman, who held this animal while I mounted the wagon, told me that he was a great horse, that told me that he was a seek have, that he had blood in his veins. I was glad to hear this, for from his eye I feared that gunpowder filled that portion of his system. He said that he was a "progeny." This was rather terrifying, but under Willie's advice I took the reins and off we started. It took me some time to get used to that horse's me some time to get used to that horse's eye—the right one. He kept looking back and looking back as much as to say, "You don't hold those reins right," And I didn't. I held them in a fierce way and tugged at them in a fantalizing fashion that would have made a horse bred in Kentucky on nas increased, unless it is that the feminine part of the establishment like to have a name at the head of their letter paper. Somebody with two acres of land in a hollow calls her place "Bellevue," and the only view to be gotten is the back of a brewery. Somebody else, evidently of a despondent state of mind, named a gloomy-looking cottage "Woodlawn," with a hope that the architect will feel as funereal as he ought to. Then there is the nest that looks as if it were painted with the yolk of the teggs from a dairy that dealt in second-class ones, and this is proud of its title as "Boffin's Bower." Then there is "Sunnyside," Sunnyside being next to a cemetery and with nend of cedar trees about it. "Dulce Domum" is painted above the door of another mansion—in color it is bilious, not sweet.

make the most of his limbs, throwing himself about in the most grotesque attitudes, seemingly enjoying his own awkwarkness as much as the spectators. When bowling he was accustomed to go through with the same antics. Dr. Busey of Washington, D. C., one of the few persons living who remember Lincoln during his one term in Congress in 1848, and who, in fact, boarded in the same mess with him at that time, says: "Congressman Lincoln was very fond of bowling, and would frequently join others of the mess, or meet other members in a match game, at the alley of James Casparis, which was near the boarding-house. He was a very awkward bowler, but played the game with great zest and spirit, solely for exercise and amusement, and greatly to the enjoyment and entertainment of the other players and bystanders by his criticisms and funny illustrations. He accepted success and defeat with like good nature and humor, and left the alley at the conclusion of the game without a sorrow or disappointment. When it was known that he was in the alley there would assemble numbers of people to witness the fun which was anticipated by those who knew of his fund of anecdotes and jokes."

THE WAR PRESIDENT WAS AN EXPERT AT WRESTLING.

He Was six Feet Four Inches Tall, Had Muscles of Iron, Loved to Frolic with the Boys, and Once Won a Number of Votes by Catting a Wide Swath in the Field.

A boy's enthusiasm for rollicking out of doors was one of Abraham Lincoln's most pleasing characteristics. He was so big and strong, he had so healthy a passion for fresh air and exercise that any game which brought his muscles into play and gave him a chance to show his endurance and skill was a delight to him. His circumstances in early life gave a fine opportunity for practicing his natural love of athletis. From the time he was 7 years old until he was 21, he lived in Southern Indiana, then a rude and uncultivated though rather thickly settled part of the country. The boys of the neighborhood spent much of their leisure in outdoor sports. Necessarily these sports were reque compared to those of today, for the boys had neither time to devote to training nor money for paraphernalia. The implements they used were frequently the very tools of their labor; thus, "throwing the mall" was a common, game, so was "pitching quoits" and "pushing weights." The "mall" came from the carpenter's bench, the "quoits" were horsestes, the weights, any heavy hammers pieces of iron they could find. Frequely they made the articles for their sirts from wood, as in the old English ane of "cat" or "tip-cat" a piece of wei perhaps two feet long was sharpen to a point at each end and then as t lay on the ground was "tipped" outruck at one end with a second stick. Hispowess in wrestling made him the he and the wrestling made him the he and the boast of all his acquaintses, and often Lincoln found he washliged to engage in "wooling and pung," because of the vainglorious bots of his mate who had, unknown to h, pitted him against the champion osome rival "corner" or "hollow."

White brought Lincoln to the theological department, where he spoke briefly to the students; but what impressed themand I well remember my brother telling us of it in great glee when he came home at noon—Lincoln invited some of the students who were walking along with him in the campus to compete in jumping over a style or fence, I don't remember which it was. This they did to the best of their ability, and at the close he vaulted over, as my brother said, 'profiting by his long legs,' and set them all into laughter and applause by his performance."

One of the most pleasing things about Lincoln's love of sports was the pleasure he took in the skill of others. It gave him delight to watch a feat of physical strength or skill. An acrobat was a wonder to him and he never tired of studying his performances. He was particularly fond of strong, tall men, and whenever he saw a man of unusual height would insist on measuring with particularly fond of strong, tall men, and whenever he saw a man of unusual height would insist on measuring with him. An unusually tall man one day sought the President on an errand. Lincoln would not allow him to leave until they had measured. It was found that the visitor was the taller. The poor fellow backed out of the room in dismay, evidently feeling he had committed a real breach of etiquette in having grown taller than the President of the United States. It was not infrequent for Lincoln when visiting the armies during the war to call upon a private, whom he had noticed in the ranks, to measure with him. In the same way, if he came across a strikingly strong man he would invariably see who could lift the more or strike the harder blow. There was never any envy in these contests. They were inspired simply by his interest in physical strength and his love of sport.

MAKORO'S RED SCARF.

THE STORY OF A JAPANESE IN-old Halkaru's Son Was Sad, for He Carried on His Conscience a Heavy Oath-Fitting Finale in a Cable Dispatch.

The cherry blossom season was at its height in the Sianamo district and the foothills of the Shotan Mountains were white with the snowy flowers. As the sun was sinking behind the hoary head of Hiermo, old Haikaru, who served the great Dalmio and lord of the district, Sanoke-Sashun, an official who could count among his retainers a thousand spearmen and half that number of swords, was descending the hill from his modest home through an alley of fragrant blossoms.

Far beyond the great fields of rice and millet that stretched away in green billows from his feet he could see the faint blue rim of the Pacific were he so in clined. But Halkaru had been climbing up and walking down this self-same hill ever since he was a boy, and though he may have sometimes wondered what that vast sea might look like on a closer view, yet he had never felt any ambition to make the tollsome journey, perforce on foot, of sixty miles to gratify an idle curiosity. He had indeed no leisure for such foolishness as, apart from his duties as civil attendant on the Daimio, he devoted all his spare time to the education of his little son, at this time a bright, olive-cheeked, healthy lad of twelve, modest and docile, the very apple of his father's eye. A mother's care the child had never known, she having died in his infancy.

HAIKARU'S SADNESS.

HAIKARU'S SADNESS. Just now the father's soul was much troubled because of the boy. From a care-free, merry, chattering child he had troubled because of the boy." From a care-free, merry, chattering child he had become within a few days a brooding, melancholy being with a strange light of fear and apprehension in his big, black eyes. To all inquiries he only replied that he was well, and his father was filled with forebodings.

Then there was another cause for anxiety. Within the month the peaceful valley had been disturbed as he had not known it in the forty years of his servitorship. Stacks of grain, from last year's reaping, has been burned in the sheds in outlying fields, and the huge rice granaries of the Daimo had been twice fired, and were saved only by the greatest efforts of the servants and guards. And now, to add to the excitement, a little flame had been discovered by a watchful sentinel eating its way into a remote corner of the great palace of the Daimio Sashun himself. This occurred as the moon was setting on the night of the 10th day of the Month of Blossoms.

Great indeed was the consternation night of the 10th day of the Month of Blossoms.

Great indeed was the consternation caused by these repeated attempts at destruction, for it seemed as if the guilty one must be among the trusted servants of the lord of the district, and each man looked suspiciously at his neighbor and trembled for himself. The wrath of the Daimio was enkindled, and while he aimed to be just, yet was he quick to anger and at times rash in his judgment and prone to punish evil-doers with an iron hand.

And so the heart of Haikaru the Faithful, as he was proud to be

And so the heart of Haikaru the Faithful, as he was proud to be

THE TELL-TALE SCARF.

THE TELL-TALE SCARF.

As he came abreast of the great dike at the head of the rice fields he noticed two soldiers of the Daimio's police—for each bore on the treast of his mantle 'he device of a white stork swallowing—coming rapidly toward him. While having no reason to fear, yethis heart beat quickly, he knew not why, and a dark shadow seemed to settle over the smilling landscape. He recognized the elder as Yorttono, whom he well knew, and saluted him first, as the hyakusho or landowner is telow the military in rank. Yoritomo responded and stopping, asked alrupily:
"Did you not, Haikaru, give to your son Makere a red scarf for the feast of banners?"

"Surely," said the old man, wonderingly, "and it was of the finest silk in Nipon, with the edge embroidered in gold thread, for Makoro, even though I, his father, say it, is a pearl among boys, truthful, gentle and obedient."

Yoritomo looked at his companion and nodded his head, then continued:
"Well, Father Haikaru, we want to see that scarf. Come back with us, and if the lad have it none will rejoice more than I. But if not, I sorrow for thee O Faithful One."
He said no more, and with a sink-

Ing heart the old man returned with them.

As they approached the house they saw Makoro crouched under a great mulberry in front of the door, gazing vacantly at the purple hills. His rosy face had lost its color and as he beheld his father and the soldiers a great fear came into his eyes. He rose up and as he bowed to kiss the old man's hand he cried:

"O, father, what is this? Why come these soldiers here?"

"I know not, son of my heart," said Halkaru, brokenly, "they would see thee."

Yorltomo laid his hand lightly on the boy's shoulder, and looking straight in his eyes, he said:

"I would see thy red scarf, Makoro," With pale face and trembling limbs the child stuttered:

"I—I—have it not, my lord."

"O, Makoro, jewel of my home, what is this? Hast thou lost it?" wailed Halkaru.

The boy started to speak, then hesi-

Halkaru.

The boy started to speak, then hesitated and looked down on the ground while a tear trembled on his wan cheek, but he answered nothing.

"Speak, Makoro," said the old man sternly.

At this the child, who had never in his short life been so roughly addressed by his loved father, dropped on his knees before him and grasped his hand on which he laid his wet face, sobbing:

"O, my father, ask me not I cannot answer."

"Here Yorltomo interposed:

"Tis enough. Come with us to the Lord Dalmio. Mayhap he will find a way to make thee speak."

BEFORE THE DAIMIO.

And so, the lad between the soldiers

And so, the lad between the soldiers and the distressed father following, they went down the hill in the gathering twilight, and through the ric-fields where lights were twinkling from fishing parties whose merry voice could be heard afar in the still even ing twilight, and through the rice fields where lights were twinkling from fishing parties whose merry voices could be heard afar in the still evening.

As they reached the grounds about the Daimlo's palace they encountered great crowds of servants and retainers who eyed them curiously and whispered comments as they passed, for the bright, smiling boy was a familiar figure there and well liked for his gentle ways.

Entering the court yard they made their way through double ranks of silent spearmen into the judgment hall and up to a richly-carpeted platform where, in the light of innumerable lanterns swinging from the roof and flaring torches held by scores of guards sat Sanoke-Sashun and on an inlaid table beside him lay a red silk scarf, embroidered with gold thread.

Yoritomo, bowing to the ground, presented his little prisoner with the report that he refused to say what had become of his scarf.

"Tis well," answered Sashun coldly, then fixing his keen, dark eyes on the boy he seemed to be studying him intently. After a few moment' pause he picked up the silk and quietly said: "Child, look on this. Is it your scarf?"

"It is, my lord," whispered Makoro faintly.

"Where hadst thou it last?"

"I wore it, great master." sobbed the boy, "on the evening of the tenth day of Blossoms when I went with my father's permission to the Hill of the Suzumushi (Crickets) to whistle against Oni the Bad, with the other boys."

"And then?" asked Sushun.

"Then—O, my lord, I dare not say anything more," and his eyes wandered affrightedly along the line of cuards.

The Dalmiot turned to the father who stood trembling by his son and said: "Halkaru, this scarf was found by the guard who discovered the fire laid at the corner of the residence. It was anything more," and his eyes wandered affrightedly along the line of suards.

The Dalmio turned to the father who stood trembling by his son and said: "Halkaru, this scarf was found by the guard who discovered the fire laid at the corner of the residence. It was anything on the ground b day of Blossoms when I went with my father's permission to the Hill of the Suzumushi (Crickets) to whistle against. Onli the Bad, with the other boys."

"And then?" asked Sushun.

"Then—O, my lord, I dare not say anything more." and his eyes wandered affrightedly along the line of guards.

The Dalmio turned to the father who istood trembling by his son and said:

"Halkaru, this scarf was found by the guard who discovered the fire laid at the corner of the residence. It was lying on the ground but a few spans from the flame. Now ask your son to tell me how it came there."

Halkaru put his trembling arm around his boy and with a choking voice he said: "Makoro, my only one, I command thee to tell the truth to our lord about this matter."

"O, my father," wailed the child, "never have I disobeyed thee in my life, but now—I dare not say anything," and again his eyes wandered fearfully to the front rank of the stolid guards. "Makoro," said the Daimio gently, "if thou hast fear of any one by talking I will protect thee. Obey thy father and me."

The child wept silently, but made no sound.

Halkaru now stepped forward and kneeling down, held out his trembling hands to the Daimio and in broken tones addressed him:

"Dear lord and master! If I have served thee and thy house faithful and true for forty years, and no man can gainsay it, I entreat thee now to spare my little son. He is under the influence of some evil one that he now for the first time disobeys me and thee. Spare him and when this has passed, as it will, he will serve thee as faithfully as I have ever done."

ONE OF THE GUARD.

While the old servitor was thus appealing for his son the Daimlo's shrewd eyes noticed that Makoro had in what seemed agonizing entreaty on one of the guards lined up along the wall.

And he saw further, that while all the others were eagerly intent on the scene before them, this particular soldier

before them, this particular soldier kept his gaze sullenly on the floor and appeared to take no interest in what was going on in front of him. He knew him, as indeed he did every man in his service, and recalled that he had ordered him a sound flogging a few months previously for some misconduct. Indeed the reputation of this black-browed spearman, Nitizin by name, was indifferent enough, and as he saw the child's wild eyes still fixed imploringly and unwaveringly on this one man, a change came over the Daimlo's stern face, and, raising his hand, he said abruptly: "Peace, Hairaku!" Sharply, "Nitizin, come hither!"

An involuntary movement of surprise thrilled the great crowd present at this command, and an ashy pallor crept over the soldier's stolid countenance

Two guards at once relieved him of his weapon.

"Now, base villian," cried Daimlo, "thou wouldst sacrifice this little child to save thy own worthless life. Release him from his oath."

Nitizin sank to the floor and bowed his head, exclaiming in a quavering voice: "I do, my lord."

"Makoro, thou hearest. Say, now, what thou knowest of this affair."

The boy's face was transfigured with joy and his eyes shone like diamonds as he heard the words of the abject soldier.

MAKORO'S STORY.

"O, my lord, and thou, my father, now I can speak and I will tell all that has been choking me since that dreadful night. When I left the boys as the moon was sinking behind the mountain, I started to run home, fearing that my father might be anxious. On the path behind the illustrious residence of my lord I stopped a moment to listen to the song of a suzumush in the grass, when I saw a man kneeling close to the wall, and a light he then made showed me this," pointing to Nitizin, "this man. Without thinking, I rushed to him and shouted, 'Ha, I have discovered the burner!' He instantly leaped'up and seized me by the throat. I was dreadfully frightened and, as well as I could, begged him not to kill me. He seemed to think a moment and then said:

"Thou artold Haikaru's son, are thou not?"

"'I answered him yes."

Finally the dog's interest got so keen that when the man went on his trips of gesticulation and whoop he went too, and contemplated the effect. Of course a knowledge of the meaning of the gestures was always denied him, but he knew the significance of a whoop and very soon he took to whooping with the man in the red shirt. He got to know when a blast was ready, and when the man was to go whooping, and invariably he accompanied him. The dog became a part of the force. He assumed responsibility, and with it dignity. He exhibits great contempt now even for the swellgreat contempt now even for the swellest dogs of the locality. The presence of another dog on the lot makes him furious. When the blast is preparing the little dog stands around in ill-concealed impatience. The moment it is in readiness he is off wildly excited. He howls at all the windows that should be closed and at others that are not important. He leaps frantically into the air, uttering at all times the most extraordinary cries. If you did not know the little dog was engaged in blasting you would think he was throwing fits.

All the servant-girls know him and promptly close the windows. He will endure no carelessness; he is there to see that the windows are closed and he will submit to no quibble. The task of the man in the red shirt is now an easy one. He merely goes along and superintends the dog. But the dog does his work so thoroughly that even the office of superintendent is mainly an honorary position.

A peculiar result of the dog's occupation is the fact that his voice is developing in a marvelous way. He can now make more noise than eight ordinary dogs and when he is working, it could easily be supposed that a general dog fight was in progress.

When the dog walks home at night with the workingmen many people take note of him. He is a yellow, under-sized more than ordinarily insignificant in appearance, but his manner has undergone such a change that he could hardly fall to attract attention. He has none of that careless doggishness which may be said to stamp almost the entire canine race. He has on the contrary a demeanor of such sobriety and dignity that few people fail to gaze after him, as he paces thoughtfully along. Many of them say as did a man who stood on the corner the other evening: There goes a dog with a good deal of business responsibility upon his shoulders."

"SIXTEEN TO ONE." YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN." A LAY SERMON.

Two thousand years before the Christian era, this wholesome advice had an imperative significance. Then, as now, the first or animal birth was but the stepping stone to the second birth or 'birth of reason.' By a violation of this invincible law of nature which land had been applied to the second birth or which land had been applied to the second birth or which land had been second by the second birth or which land had been second by the second birth of the second birt ture, which tends to a mere existence on the lower plane of sensuality, un-rest, disappointment, crime, insan-ity or whatever might follow as its legitimate fruit, each succeeding age has plunged deeper and deeper into the consequences of this unchangeable law of cause and effect. "Ye must," and there is no other way to drink from the fountain of intelligence, but to liberate that operative nerve center which regulates the brain. Not by the slow stage coach of precept, example, drugs or prison discipline, but by the electric flash of thought upon the telegraphic nerves whose normal action leads to a predestined ideal life. Sex and sex alike this moral controlling organ directs the life of every human. Fearing to oppose either the spirit or letter of this natural law, the ancients enforced the requirements of a balanced organism and advanced in art and science and attained great age without the use of drugs, prisons or insane asylums, as illustrated by the Jews, who have little use for them, even by a partial ob-servance of this seemingly simple reg-ulation. But it is not claimed that the physical and intellectual giants who long ago enforced this only law of human progression were aware of the nervous organism thus operated, or employed edge tools in the operation; for the human fingers are en-tirely sufficient to do all that is required if attended to in time. Ten years have passed since it was discovered that the physical and mental force of man is each impelled from its respective focal center in the lower organs. Back from the buried centuries when Methuselah and other aspirants for perpetual life on earth gave the lesson of physical perfection as the basis of health and mental balance, there comes again the assurance of extended years. Upon that notable dissecting table was discovered the operating nerve ter-minals, which, through the calls of nature, operate the vital forces in perfect humanity and give their perfecting to the world as the uni-versal remedy for all who need repairs.

SIXTEEN TO ONE.

SIXTEEN students who had set sail upon the medical sea of uncer-tainty were cured of their various afflictions by this simple adjustment of nerves, as a test of the universal application of this ONE remedy. Why it is that, after thousands have been cured by this means alone and are being con-stantly reported in journals advocating this principle, this 'only cure on earth' should be allowed to suffer the contaminating influ-ence of a thus exploded theory of drug financiering, has never been explained.

By this discovery the healing art is again returned to the people who have so long suffered the tortures of professional experiment.

Its acceptance will be through a general intelligence of those seek health, rather than those who seek revenue from disease. To be drugged into insensibility is a different proposition from removing the obstruction to a self-cleansing and self-repairing organism.

HEALTH IS NATURAL, and only requires free action of the nerves to obtain the highest ideal; therefore all sickness or peculiar actions present a natural reby enforcing their freedom. the natural requirements of this second birth become again imperative, as its language would suggest, and these recently discovered nerve centers are again known to be the key or regulator of the en-tire physical and mental forces, the long-hoped-for millenium will be at hand.

An important feature of this discovery is that any person of ordi-nary intelligence may instantly locate the cause of any physical or mental disturbance without pro-fessional aid. It seems wonderful that nature should have provided on every hand, for rich and poor alike, a universal remedy for sick-ness or pain which excels all other means of cure.

While this ever-ready and instantaneous means of forcing a circula-tion of blood was revealed to all natural tribes, those who ought to adopt this lesson of health are perishing without knowing that the life principle is within themselves, and needs only to be set in motion. As the dilation of nature is always deficient in any sickness or pain, no sufferer should fail to try this "free to all" remedy.

In case of accident or sudden shock, when delays are dangerous, He who always provides gave this boon to all "without money and without price." The gloomy, the discouraged, whose expectations are not realized, the revengeful. the intemperate, the bad, will find that the requirements of this text have not been complied with in their special cases.

A SIXTEEN page booklet, complete in ONE volume, giving the most approved method and illusmost approved method and illustrating convenient and inexpensive appliances for forcing a circulation of the blood in any obstructed part may be had free at the office of The Missing Link, 431 South Spring street, Los Angeles, Cal., or will be sent for stamp. The cause of any physical or mental disturbance instantly located and the natural remedy prescribed without charge.

First secure a box such as canned goods are packed in and break it apart, taking care not to split any of the thin boards; then purchase a lamp fount having a good central-draught burner, and of the boards make a box the square of which will be about an inch larger than the diameter of the lamp fount.

square of which will be about an inch larger than the diameter of the lamp fount.

This box should be about twelve inches high and eight inches square; in the top cut a round hole sufficiently large to admit the fount but not so large that it would fall through.

There will be a metal rim or flange around the top edge of the fount to rest on the edge of the hole. In the bottom of the box have a few large holes to allow the necessary draught to pass up to the burner.

Cover the entire outside of the box with bagging stretched tight and tacked securely at the corners, or, if preferable, it may be held in place with Lepage's or other good liquid glue painted on each side of the box and against which the bagging may be firmly pressed. When the glue is dry give the bagging several successive coats of paint of some desirable color, such as sage green, old iron, or light salmon pink, and when it is thoroughly dry bind the edges and corners of the hox with thin strips of metal.

At a tinsmith's purchase a few sheets of thin stovepipe iron and cut it in strips an inch and a half in width. Lap them on the corners of the box so hree-quarters of an inch of metal will appear on a side. With an awl and a mail hammer make holes in the metal trips an inch apart, and with oval-aaded brass uphoisterers' tacks, fasten he strips to the box.

The torch and leaves forming the treaths can be cut from the thin sheet on with a stout pair of shears and applied to the box with iron carpet tacks. The stems to the wreaths are pleces of iron caught down with small apples.

A very good black paint for metal can be made by adding lamp black to brass lacquer, and if too thick it may be thinned with alcohol to the consistency of rich milk and applied to the metal with a soft bristle brush.

A balloon shade made of silk, paper or silkoline will add the finishing touch to the lamp, and one of this shape will be found desirable, as it completely shades the eyes from any direct rays from the bright light.

THE FADETTES.

A Successful Orchestra of Women-Result of Mrs. Nichol's Enterprise. (CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.)

One of the latest ventures into what has hitherto been considered a purely masculine realm, is the formation of the ladies' orchestra on am entirely business basis. The most noted of such business basis. The most noted of such feminine combinations is that known as the Fadettes, whose headquarters are in Boston, and which was regularly incorporated last winter. It rumbers twenty young ladies, all well educated, well-bred and attractive girls, thorough musicians and thoroughly in earnest in their chosen pursuit.

The leader and the manager of this novel band is Mrs. Caroline B. Nichols, a young woman of charming personality and surprising ability as a business director. As a finished violinist she is unrivaled in the city of culture, while she loves and understands music as only one can who has been born with a ta'ent fer the melodious science and has been enabled to cultivate it to the highest degree of perfection. Though youthful, this feminine orchestra has made an entire success of its undertaking, having already gained the confidence and approval of the Boston public and that of all the neighboring districts, being recognized as the woman's orchestra, par excellence, of New England. The fair players do all the musical entertaining of the representative clubs of Yankeedom, and ergoy the good will and good opinion of their masculine rivals. jacent States, always meeting with encouragement and success. They declare their profession to be a lucrative one, and recommend it as delightful in all respects, as they meet with social favor on every side, and are made much of by their patrons.

The Fadettes have a pretty office on Tremont street, in Boston, and a clubroom which they use as a resting place and stop-over-night, and where they can entertain their friends, feeling entirely at home in their own special sanctum, with its, comfortable appointments and feminine nick-nacks.

Several of their number are soloists of exceptional merit, and they are thus enabled to present a varied programme. They are so well trained that they are capable of rendering classical selections with as much ease and finish as the lighter music, and are thus in demand for all occasions. They have become quite the fad among fashionable circles to play for dancing at balls or "small and earlies," and are favorites for afternoon or evening musicales at the houses of the "smart set."

They have struck out in an entirely new line for the petticoat persuasion. When the large hotels open at the fashionable resorts for warm weather, the Fadettes engage themselves out as summer orchestras, quite eclipsing the sterner sex, they are such a novelty, and besides, they look so pretty in their dainty frocks, for, be it understood, they are a very well-dressed and altogether fin de siecle young company of musicians. They are prime favorites with the guests of the hotel at which they are magaed, and when not occupied with their playing or practicing they end, the playing or practicing they end, the playing or practicing they end the usual up-hill battle such as all enterprising women have, like their sisters in other professions they have persuaded the public in one more line, that they can do good work even though they are women, and also that their womanliness is not one whit the less for honest labor.

A little knowledge of physi-ology, and a few hints on the sublects, however, will enable any woman to comprehend the precise art of filling and emptying the lungs on scientific principles. is to breathe in as much sunshine as possible, and to believe in the efficacy of oxygen as a remedy for nearly all the ills that flesh is heir to.

The following are some excellent rules for improving the respiration and bringing it up to a normal condition: Stand at an open window or recline on a couch with the waist and chest unconfined; hold the chest walls high and inhale in slow, long breaths; exhale as slowly, three times only at first. Gradually the number of times may be increased and the time lengthened for the breathing exercises. Fifteen minutes, twice a day at least, should be devoted to this exercise to accomplish the desired results. To inhale long, deep breaths while slowly raising the arms above the head, and to exhale as slowly while lowering them is one of the best breathing exercises ever invented. The practice of breathing very deeply while walking in the open air is recommended not only for the general health, but is one of the best cures for obesity, as the increased amount of oxygen greatly augments the consumption of waste material.

Mrs. Emma Eames Story, whose full and generous outlines are beautiful examples of the results of vocal and breathing gymnastics, not only is fond of outdeor life, of walking and horseback riding, but says that the requirements of her art demand continued daily practice of the very exercises which we have recommended for the development of chest, back and abdomen.

When the first baby came the good wiseacres pitied it also. Its mother, they said, would either neglect it shamefully, or visit upon it double the rigors of her own training. Thus the critics. The woman they criticised laughed contentedly when she was told what they said. She did have theories of child-training and home government, she admitted—further she meant to put them in practice. Meantime, would her real friends kindly suspend judgment for, say ten years—then she would be willing to talk over the matter with them—and, perhaps, with the advantage of actual demonstration. At the end of that period she finds herself with six boys and girls. At birth they were neither better nor worse than the average young human animal. Yet their mother's brow is smooth, her bloom but lightly touched—she smiles happily, and all her face is irradiated with motherly sweetness. She has time to sew, to read, to walk, to visit, entertain her friends and her husband's—and to think over modern problems. Best of all, her children rise up and call her blessed, with clamorous acclaim of small happy tongues.

She lives in an old-fashioned corner house, with big square rooms, and a scrap of back yard. Two servants do the work—washing included. They have been there since the household was set up—and are likely to remain until they can retire upon age pensions—or go into new houses with some one of the youngsters they have helped to bring up. For they are kindly and justly treated, recognized as human beings with rights that are to be no less strenuously respected than they themselves are bound to respect those of master and mistress. Especially are the children trained to give them respectful courtesy. well-placed in life than yourselves."

THE SECRET.

When asked the other day to tell the secret of happiness which she had so evidently discovered, the lady smiled a little, then bade the questioner come with her to the play-room. It is in the top of the house—a big, light apartment, with three windows, each protected by strong wire gratings which make falls from them impossible. The floor is of well-matched boards, and bare, save for rugs and cushions here and there. Walls and ceiling are hard-finished, and of a light pinky-gray. Cheerful pictures—flowers, fruits, birds, animals, Cupids, and cherubs, with Mother Goose, and lots of Brownies, hang all over the upper walls. Lower down there are racks for pictures, kites, flags, lances, toy fishing rods, and so on.

For furniture there are deal tables of varying heights, wicker chairs to fit all ages from one year to twenty, a stout basket for each child, with pockets inside, and a bag over the top, and several screens which began life as clothes horses. To bring them to their present estate, they have been covered with gray paper muslin, put on very smooth, then adorned with pictures, pasted at the taste or whim of the nursery occupants.

Women Rarely Use Lungs to Their Full Capacity.

As a matter of fact, not one woman in a hundred breathes normally. The respiration of the average woman varies with every change of mental state or physical condition; grief, depression, fatigue, all have their influence in lowering the amount of oxygen that goes into the system, and it is a rare thing for a woman to use her lungs to the best possible advantage.

"Here is the secret of my good chil-dren—that is, if there is any secret," the mother said. "From the first, I try to teach objectively, patience, fortry to teach objectively, patience, for-bearance, courtesy, respect for the rights of others—in short, self-govern-ment. Each has a house and is supreme in it, but bound by the laws of courtesy toward any one of the others who comes as a visi-tor. I myself am only a visitor—and would no more think of taking au-thority there than I would in any other house. I am bound to say, though, that my trouble is mainly to find enough advice and counsel to satisfy my dear hosts.

NURSERY MANAGEMENT.

In February, the amethyst is the reigning gem, and, as one misht easily guess, its chosen companion is its prototype in color, the fragrant violet.

The agate claims supremacy for March, sharing its honors only with the primrose, beloved of poets.

The sparkling diamond, a dewdrop crystallized, best expresses showery April, and with it goes the Easter daisy, emblem of innocence.

In May, the emerald, reflecting the color of green fields, is the fitting gem to present, accompanied by a spray of eglantine, or a pink as tender as the inner shell of the ocean.

The pretty sapphire, blue as the eyes of nymphs, and the proud peony are chosen to celebrate a June fete.

The ardent ruby and the royal illy are July's special emblems, while the sardonyx and carnations in mixed colors constitute August's souvenirs.

The sapphire, suggesting the infinite blue of a September sky, and the rose of France, queen of roses, dominate September festivals.

The beautiful month of October rejoices in the mysterious opal and the fragrant heliotrope for its fete occasions, and no ill-luck attaches to the opal worn by a person whose natal stone it is.

That bit of condensed sunshine, the topaz, with a cluster of exquisitely-tinted chrysanthemums make a November day to rejoice, while nothing less than the sweet, pale turquoise and the glistening holly are esteemed fitting to mark the closing month of the year.

Massage has lost a little of its vogue in Paris for the treatment of obesity, and now they are starting an establishment which is sure to introduce a new and interesting feature into Parasian life, bringing with it the Roman and Eastern customs of old. but then shall I know even as also I am known.—I Corinthians, xiii; 9, 10, 12.

The religious charlatan uses no such words. This is not the language of a man whose chief resource is pretension. osture speaks vauntingly of what it knows and sees—it claims to know everything. The words of St. Paul come to us as the words of a man whom we can trust, for he confesses that he knows in part, prophesies in part.

We meet now and then the man who is sure everywhere and we find it hard to really trust him anywhere. He does violence to probability. Men, as we know them, do not see so clearly, and the world, as we know it, is not read so easily. "I would be much pleased," said Lord Melbourne, "if I could be as said Lord Melbourne, "if I could be as Macaulay is of everything"—a judgment largely just. Loved everywhere and read everywhere as a great writer, Macaulay, as a great historian, has been put by, marked and discredited as a victim to the intellectual vice of always being sure.

Being sure is not necessarily a crime and to be unsure is no essential mark of Being sure is not necessarily a crime and to be unsure is no essential mark of virtue; but the man to whom the universe is an a b c for simplicity, and a multiplication table for coherency, is not a man who can lead the open-minded and the honest-hearted of the earth. Life is at least a puzzle, and there is no use in saying it is not a puzzle. History is a maze, and the man who walks through three centuries of English life as you and I would walk to the postoffice is not a man who, whatever the charm and dignity of his periods, can persuade us that he really knows the world of which he speaks. Reserve in judgment is not only the part of intellectual modesty, it is the mark also of intellectual discernment. The man, who, through any range of this life's acreage, claims to see all is below the mark not only in what he claims but in what he sees. He falls, not in humility only, but in observation. The greater the man's mind, the nobler the heart, the more do the real world which presses round us, and the real life which rises in us, bring the assurance that we know in part and that we prophesy in part.

But St. Paul is very far from regardnd to be unsure is no essential mark of know in part and that we prophesy in part.

But St. Paul is very far from regarding all claims to knowledge as an intellectual impertinence. Professions of certainty are to him not altogether false. He knows that there are problems which he cannot solve, that there are questions which he cannot answer; but he knows also that there are truths which we may find, and that through the massing shadows which lie upon the world's face are shot certain lines of light which have transfigured the mystery of darkness into the mystery of love. He feels, as every honest man must feel, that over us are unmeasured worlds and that under us are unsounded depths, but that none the less between the heights above and the depths below he may keep a measured pace upon the solld firmament of earth. He has somewhere to stand, he has somewhat to teach. The problems he cannot solve have not unnerved him. The truths he may not find have not robbed him of the truths which have come finding him. Though we prophesy in part, still we prophesy; though we know in part—still we know.

Thus St. Paul, while setting forth the edge," but "faith." The first words of her creed are not "I know," but "I believe;" for the margins of that country in which we claim our citizenship mark their courses far in the eternal and the unseen. To speak with easy precision about all its high concerns is to make men feel that it is not the large country which we think it. Before we may make truth as small as the average mind we must empty truth of half its bulk. It is to do more. It is to wrong, not truth alone, but character as well. That which helps us most and best is not always what we possess, but what we win. Some truths are not ours, in order that we may make them ours; there are some difficulties which exist that we may get strength by doing battle. Far and high and free they stretch before us—these ranges of conquest.

A legend of Germany speaks of one who stands expectant, but half dismayed before the upreaching helghts of earth and rock, which hold him from the journey's end. But one slight step is free before him, and over that the unkindly walls of stone. Slight though it be, he takes it, for it is one step nearer. But as he takes it, another step opens within the mountain's side. On this and on each other 'added stone, by the rocky stairway which grows beneath his feet, is the cliff scaled at last. Taking the next step—this is the secret.

SOCIAL ETHICS. As Columbus discovered a neglected hemisphere, so we are just discovering a neglected hemisphere of church work—the hemisphere of social ethics.—Rev. W. F. Craft, Presbyterian, Washington.

CHRIST THE EXAMPLE. The fame of the Savior has endured through all the ages. His life is the only perfect life in the history of mankind. We should emulate his example.—(Rev. George Lavary, Episcopalian, Boston. PERILS OF THE NATION. We ought not to be bilind to our government in immigration, in socialism, in Mammonism, in Sabbath desecration, and intemperance.—(Rev. W. den, and a Dane for every eight in Denmark.—(Rev. Dr. Pille, Methodist, San Francisco.

CHRISTIAN LIVING. We have churches and altars all over the land, but do they glow with sufficient love for humanity to warm the souls of those about us and bring them to a realization of where they really stand? Do individual Christians live such lives as reflect about them the goodness of God?—(Rev. T. A. Canady, Methodist, Paris, Ill.

WHAT WE LACK. God has a great plan mapped out for the human race, and each man has his work assigned him. Few of us make the most of ourselves, or our physical, intellectual or moral powers. There is something in the family, the church or the State that we ought to be, but are not.—(Bishop J. H. Johnson, Episcopalian, Los Angeles.

WOMAN'S WORK. Woman wields a powerful influence in the home, and is, therefore, the real power in public life. On the field of battle, in the church, at home, and in foreign lands, she is responsible for much of the success, while in the work of philianthropy she has gone where diplomacy and armies could not venture.—(Rev. J. C. B. Stivers, Christian. Pittsburgh. POLITICS AND RELIGION. Just so long as good men walk one way in their religion and another in their polities has nothing to do with religion, so long will bad men with selfish schemes and unscrupulous methods control affairs. Religion must be mixed with politics, business, industrial and social life.—(Rev. F. B. Cherinston, Congregationalist, Spokane, Wash.

CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM. The gosbel of Christ applies to the great questions of tariff and finance, and immigration, to the recognition of Cuban immigration, to the recognition of Cuban immigration, to the recognition of Cuban tions of the immortality of the soul, or the destiny of the impenitent.—(Rev. G. A. Cleaveland, Baptist, Riverside, Cal.

THE SABBATH. The home mission problem in all the denomination will be largely solved as soon as Sabbath laws are enforced. The Sabbath question is fundamental. It underlies everything. If the Sabbath goes, so do the church, the Bible and the family. Who will care to go to church or read the Bible if the Sabbath becomes a dead letter?—(Rev. Alexander Allison, Congregationalist, New York.

DOUBT. Is there any suspense more awful than that of an unsatisfied spiritual nature? Is there any life so uncomfortable as that which alternates perpetually between the hope of eternal salvation and the fear of eternal destruction? Is there any condition of heart more harrowing than that which keeps all religious questions unsettled, all high and ennobling duties undefined and unobeyed?—(Rev. W. H. Moore. Presbyterian, Doylestown, Pa. HINDRANCES. What are the hindrances to the growth of the church in this our day? They are many, and sad and serious, and it is lamentable to state that we are losing more than we gain. A few odd conversions will not make up for the thousands who are every day being lost to the church from three causes—intemperance, fashion and mixed marriages.—(Rev. J. M. Kieley, Catholic, Brooklyn.

DUTY IN POLITICS. Politics is the science of government, and there is no duty more sacred than to take our part in the shaping of ends of our government. Let us see to it that education and religion keeps step with the march of our nation and let the flag of our country float.

in the shaping of ends of our government. Let us see to it that education and religion keep step with the march of our nation and let the flag of our country float, a symbol of a great nation and a free people. (Rev. A. A. Willetts, Methodist, Spring Lake, N. J. GOD'S WORKSHOP. The church is God's great workshop, and every man in it is supposed to be a workman. But the truth is that the majority of church members simply stand with folded arms and see others work. They cannot be relied on for the performance of any task because they have not learned and will not learn how it must be done.—(Rev. Dr. Hawthorne, Baptist, Nashville.

THE BIBLE. The people think they know the Bible, but they do not. That is the everlasting delusion of the devil, the ever running sophism of hell. No man knows the Bible as he ought to know it—its music, its conception, its sweep of historical information, its poetry, its great love. It amazes me every time I look into its sacred pages.—(Rev. A. J. Harris, Baptist, Fort Worth, Tex.

NATURALIZEDAMERICANS. When a foreigner becomes naturalized, he should be American, body, soul, and tional law.—(Rev. Dr. Millard, Presbyterian, Rochester.

LIFE'S STRUGGLE. It is the struggle with lower nature, the fight between the spirit life and the beast life, that makes man sublime. Evolutionists tell us that it is the struggle for existence that has made everything that is noble and beautiful in the world. It is the struggle for moral existence that proves man akin to God who lives rather than to the beasts that perish. The peace that comes through giving up that struggle is the peace of moral death.—(Rev. W. P. Merrill, Presbyterian, Chicago.

(Rev. W. P. Merrill, Presbyterian, Chicago.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE. Our first and fundamental maxim should be never to entangle ourselves in the broils of Europe; our second never to suffer Europe to interfere with cisatiantic affairs. America, North and South, has a set of interests distinct from those of Europe and peculiarly her own. She should, therefore, have a system of her own, separate and distinct from that of Europe. While the last is laboring to become the domicile of despotism, our endeavor should be to make our hemisphere that of freedom.—(Rev. H. H. Barbour, Baptist, Columbus, O.

ETHICS ABOVE CREED, What Christ taught concerning character tells us of today that only Christian ethics gives a firm foundation and is superior to theology, which is only theory, whereas religion is life. The world selects men for what they are. If we select a receiver for a bank or a guardian for an estate we would not select a man because he was a Unitarian, or a Calvinist, or a Trinitarian, or an Armenian: we would select him because he was honest and a true man before men.—(Rev. T. G. Dickinson, Methodist, Columbus, O.

OUR NATIONAL PERIL. The great peril threatening our country today is the indifference to political duty on the part of many good citizens. The ballot-box should be guarded against the immoral vote and the disloyal vote. America was founded as an asylum for the oppressed, and she must ever be a refuge for all people. But there should not be awelcome accorded to any one who does not come to our land to be an American. The preacher of revelution, the apostle of dynamite and the followers of the red flag should not be allowed entrance to our ports.—(Rev. J. F. Carson, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

AMERICA THE GREAT. It has been so ordained of God that in the few centuries of our existence as a nation we, the people of different climes, should constitute one grand unity, so harmonized and Americanized as to form a nation of which we may well feel proud. Though one of the youngest of the great nations of the earth, we are not only one of the foremost, but without vanity we may claim to be in the van. There are more general intelligence, a higher standard of civil and religious freedom, and hence, in some form, a higher general civilization than are to be found in any of the advanced nations of the old world.—(Rev. J. W. Love, Episcopalian, Kansas City. HOPE AND FAITH. Where there is no hope there is no endeavor. No man would rationally bestir himself in the understand of the spaired. Unless we feel that there is no hope there is no endeavor. No man would rationally bestir himself in the CHURCH AND STATE. Americans do not want a union of the church and state. We will fight against it. It has ruined several countries and will ruin ours if we are not on the lookout. The Catholics would not like to see the state united with the Presbyterians or any other church. We appreciate what the Catholics have done for our country. They have done many good deeds. But they are in fear of the pope and priests, and their worship is inforced rather than voluntary.—(Rev. H. T. Beatty, Presbyterian, Hoboken, N. J. LITERATURE. Books are the voices rather than voluntary.—(Rev. H. T. Beatty, Presbyterian, Hoboken, N. J. LITERATURE. Books are the voices of the distant dead and make us heirs of the life of the past ages. The rich and the poor alike may enjoy this fellowship with the great, for books are now so cheap that they are within the means of all. It matters but little how poor we are and how much we may be ignored and neglected by the prosperous of our own time, the sacred writers will enter and take up their abode with us, and we may enjoy the imagination of Shakespeare, the imagenty of Milton, the wisdom of Plato, the beauty and loveliness of Mrs. Browning, the discrimination of McCosh, the stories of Dickens and Scott and Irving, the genius of Franklin, and the learning and intelligence of the minds that have been pollished and liluminated by contact with the greatest and wisest.—(Rev. M. E. Snyder, Methodist, Moorestown, Pa.

When a little one is expected in the family how lovingly the parents plan together for its future well-fare. They sometimes even forecast its education and career. Does this seem too early to anticipate while the child is yet unborn? It isn't. The child's destiny has already been partly mapped out by Nature according to the disposition and habits of the parents. The best plan a mother can make for the future happiness of her unborn child is to maintain her own cheerfulness and health while her child's undeveloped being is still a part of hers. Her health at this critical period is of tremendous consequence to the little one's whole future existence. Every prospective mother will find direct nourishment, comfort and sustaining strength, in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It will maintain her vitality both bodily and mental; shorten the period of confinement and make labor easy and almost painless. It imparts strength and elasticity to the organs concerned in parturition, invests the mother with recuperative energy against any after period of weakness and depression, and aids in the secretion of healthy nourishment for the child. It is the unfailing cure of all "female weaknesses."

It never took well with the common people who have the soundest judgment in such matters, but over the sparkling style of it literary men lost their heads. No play written in recent years re-ceived so much discussion in the papers, and Oscar Wilde, who had long been notorious, suddenly became celebrated. The older authors, jealous of their new rival, studied his comedy to arrive at the secret of its renown, became vic-tims of its style and presently every mother's son of them tried to imitate fore long we saw the incongruous spec-tacle of sober Englishmen borrowing Irish wit to put in Parisian clothes that covered Norwegian bodies. For a time the influence of Oscar Wilde ruled the stage of England and this country, and, as we may see by later manifestations, the London authors have not yet escaped from it. Out of his dungeon cell the fat hand of this felon stretched forth to dictate the last plays of Henry Arthur Jones, Arthur W. Pinero and Sydney Grundy. The strange, unhealthy, Svengali-like influence of Oscar-Wilde was far-reaching and long-continued. He hypnotized even that mixture of wit and madness, Bernard Shaw, cast a spell over Augustus Thomas, Bronson Howard and Henry Guy Carlton, obtained possession of Guy Carlton, obtained possession of Clyde Fitch, and mesmerized Richard Mansfield."

who, by a lucky stroke of the pick, finds an enormous fortune and keeps it. David Moffat, the mining king, says the failures are not so great as in other businesses. It is certain that the successes are more phenomenal. I write today not of the failure, but of the sucthe millionaires of Cripple Creek. Out of this gold camp, within five years, has come $13,000,000. The gold dug out last year was worth $8,-

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 10, 1896 .- I doubt whether an offer of $10,000,000 Thousands fail in mining. Hundreds make a living. Tens amass a competency, but it is only now and then one and the best bank for him is Old Mother Earth.

HOW STRATTON STRUCK IT. And still I would not like to be Winfield Scott Stratton. I would not exchange places with him for all his millions. This thought came forcibly upon me as I sat with him in his little office over a bicycle store in Colorado Springs the other day, and watched him closely as I listened to him. He is only 48 years of age, but he looks 000,000, and this year the output prom- to be more than 60. His hair is as ises to be fully as large. The stories I hear of gold dug out and gold in sight make my avaricious mouth water, and, like the hungry, ragged newsboy on the street outside the confectionery store, I press my nose against the glass and long for the riches within.

STRATTON, THE MINING KING. Take for instance, W. S. Stratton, who owns the great Independence mine, which has been turning out nearly $2000 a day for the past year, changed to a mahogany brown by the hardships of his laborious career and the anxiety of his hunt for gold. He is nervous in the extreme, and he has, I believe, little capacity for happiness. The story of his life is that of a man who has devoted himself to finding a mine, and who, after twenty years of failure, has at last succeeded. He has of good comp be able to invest the money which he receives from the gold which they get out. So far he has spent his surplus in buying other mines, and he has today properties, which, I am told, make him the largest individual owner of gold mines in the world. I doubt whether he knows himself what he is worth. I know that no one can figure upon his possibilities. I am told that Marshall Field and other Chicago capitalists offered him $7,000,000 for his Independence mine alone, and long ago he refused an offer of $3,000,000 for it. He does not like to talk about it, and

He is a man of few amusements and of little intellectual resource. He failed again and again, and up until 1891 he was practically nothing. He had at this time a house in Colorado Springs, which was mortgaged, and it was in May of that year, that he, rendered almost desperate by his repeated failures, went to prospect about Cripple Creek. He realized that there was some gold in the boulders or float which lay upon the grazing lands of this region, but up to this time no one had considered the rock to be worth much. As Stratton walked over the fields

he noticed one stone, the corner of which some former prospector had chipped off. He picked up the broken piece and sent it to Denver to be assayed. It yielded over $300 to the ton. This was a surprise to Stratton. He at once gathered a wagon-load of other stones lying about the place and sent these to the assayer's. They told him that the last was worth only $10 a ton. This, however, showed Stratton that there was gold there, and he staked out a claim about the big boulder, and went to work. It was the feet on either side. He soon began to find gold everywhere. Even the rocks lying on the surface of the ground netted him a fortune. There was some great boulders near his shaft. He had these broken up with dynamite, and from them alone he got $60,000. It from them alone he got $60,000. was not, however, all clear sailing. At one time the gold seemed to have played out, and he offered to sell the mine for $150,000. His offer was re-fused, and within a few days after this he made another rich strike, and for twenty-five days he took out $1000 a day. At present he has gone between six and seven hundred feet down into the earth, and there is no doubt what-ever but that there are millions of dollars' worth of gold betwen the levels which have been already mined. The mine seems to be growing richer as it goes downward, and his refusal to sell it for $7,000,000 was, in the minds of many here, a good business decision.

THE HABITS OF A MILLIONAIRE.

A man whose income has been about

The ore grew richer as he dug down, and, after a short time, he found pockets and fissures filled with gold. The gold did not run regularly. Sometimes there would be a pocket as big as the average parlor, and sometimes the rock containing the rich ore would extend only to the size of a tumbler. He sunk his shaft, however, and ran out laterals from two to three hundred

$3 a day finds it hard to jump at once to the spending of from $2000 to $3000 Mr. Stratton at present is not, attempting to live up to his income. The little yellow cottage in which he lives in Colorado Springs, did not, I venture, cost more than $500, and the servant girl, who, with her sleeves rolled up, came to the door when I called, looked as though she might find it hard anywhere to get more than $10 a month. Just below his mine Strat-ton has another house. It has only ave rooms, and it cost in the neighborhood of $1000. I am told that he is building a house at Colorado Springs which will cost him something like $52,000. His offices are of the most unprefentious nature, and he secludes himself in order to keep off the beggars. For some weeks he had to have a policeman about his home at Cripple Creek to keep the crowd away from ple Creek to keep the crowd away from him, and his private secretary told me that he receives about two hundred begging letters a day. He is not a mean man, but he has no idea of the possibilities nor the pleasure of givng. His charities so far have been purely individual, and in most case to friends. Not long ago his driver saved his life and that of his sister by keeping the horses in the road during an attempted runaway. At the end of the drive Stratton gave the man a check for Stratton gave the man a check for $1000. He has given to his wife, who is separated from him, $50,000, and I am told that he frequently hands checks or bills to his sister, who lives with him. He is said to be very sen-sitive as to being asked for money, and a friend of his tells me that his sister never says a word about wanting a dol-lar. I have heard it suggested that if lar. I have heard it suggested that if she did so it would not be forthcoming, She just waits and he gives her a check for one, two, or five hundred dol-He is lars, as the spirit moves him.

HOW THREE POOR MEN MADE Stratton received more than $12,000 last year in dividends from his stock in the Portland gold mine. This mine and in which it is estimated there are from $4,000,000 to $7,000,000 of gold in sight. How would you like to own that? It would be enough for yourself and your family for ages to come. It is one of the richest gold mines of the world, and the man who owns it was working five years ago at a carpenter's bench. Up to that time he would have been glad, I venture, to have netted from the work of his hands, $50 a month. His mine last year, it is said, produced $960,000 at a cost of about 10 cents on the dollar, and the ore is so rich that he has to keep back his workmen for fear that he will not the value of the property, they would buy all the claims about it. So they a prospect, but its owners, I am told, got their ore out in secret, and carried it down from the mine at night in sacks on their backs.

would not take a million for it. It is the property of two men who came to the Rockies with a little money and bought the Chief mine and the Docwanted. So one night they took a wagon up to the mine and prepared to haul it away by the wagon load. They overloaded their wagon, however, and it broke down just as they were about to leave the mine. The next day the ore was found on the side of the hill with the broken wagon near it. This showed the value of the mine and from that time on they hauled their ore out. They had, however, to fight for they had, however, to fight for their rights. Other miners tried to jump their claim and Burns took a shotgun and drove them out at the point of it. They had forty-seven lawsuits about their title, but their ore tor mine, two claims which lay side ble in the world. President Burns estimates that their average cutput is to pay, but there are spots in nearly worth $70 a ton and he says that there every mine where large amounts of is one streak of ore in the mine that high-grade gold have been found. The is worth about $38,000 a ton, the rock running nineteen ounces of gold to the ages about $200 a ton, and the averages Is worth about $35,000 a ton, the rock running nineteen ounces of gold to the ton. At the selling value of the Portland stock, the property is worth between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 and I venture you could not buy it for $6,000,000. They paid last year more than $480,000 in dividends and until last year they were paying 3 cents a share in dividends every month. They have given a pledge to their stockholders that they will pay 36 per cent. In dividends this year and they claim that that have not begun to get near the end of their wonderful gold treasure. The mine has now, it is said, five miles of workings and its machinery is some of the finest known.

THE DOCTOR MINE.

Many of the best mines here have no stock on the market. The oldest miners in Colorado say that Cripple Creek ore last year is estimated at $60 a ton. Now and then a rich pocket is struck, however, which will pay a thousand dollars and upward a ton, and such places in the mines are carefully watched, for fear the mines will carry away the gold. The manager of one of the biggest gold mines told me before they left the mine, and in certain parts of the mines they were always required to change their clothes upon coming in and going out. Not long ago a miner was suspected of stealing ore. His cabin was searched, and more than $1500 worth of rich gold-bearing rock was found. He had carried out the richest pieces from time to time in his pockets, and all together had taken out ninety-six more of the shipments of Cripple Creek ore last year is estimated at $60 a ton. Now and then a rich pocket is struck, however, which will pay a thousand dollars and upward a ton, and such places in the mines are carefully watched, for fear the mines will carry away the gold. The manager of one of the biggest gold mines told me ways required to change their clothes upon coming in and going out. Not long ago a miner was suspected of stealing ore. His cabin was searched at the policy of the best mines are made to the place at the mines are carefully watched, for fear t nounds, which was worth $16 a po or $1536 worth of ore.

LEASING MINES.
Speaking of the leasing of the Li

tor ruling, the custom of lessing mines is very common here. Men will take mines and work them for a certain time for a fixed price, or for a proportion of the gold gotten out. There are many men who have good prospects, who have not the money to work them, and one with a moderate amount of capital can either get a lease on such prospects, or buy a share in them. Take, for instance, the Anchoria Leland mine, the stock of which was selling for 4 cents a share about a year or so ago. It has this year sold for $3 a share, and it is practically not for sale in the expenses. This mine was consed up by when the government continued to issue the mines are succeed up by a strong transfer in them. Take, for instance, the angle of the figure of a young Hercules going out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of them showing a Vulcan beating out to war, while the spirited etchings in the lower corners, one of the practically not for sale in the ex-changes. This mine was opened up by a lease. It was not considered worth much until a man named Maloney from Dakota came through Cripple Creek on his way to Leadville. He looked at the mine and leased it. He spent $7500 in opening it up, and in one year, I am told, he took $400,000 worth of gold out of it. His lease has now expired, and the mine will be worked by the stockholders.

CREEK.

I could give numerous other instances of fortune making in mines. could find perhaps ten thousand times as many instances of men losing in mines, but mining is in reality a legitimate business, and I believe if followed with the same care investigation and business ability as are required to give success in other busiquired to give success in other busi-nesses, the chances of making money are good. Here, for instances, is a list of the millionaires of Cripple Creek, as given by an old miner. I not vouch for the truth of his esti-

W. S. Stratton was worth nothing, s now worth $10,000,000.

James F. Burns, James Doyle and John Harnan, each worth more than a million, made out of the Portland and other properities.

James R. McKinnie, a friend of Stratton, and one of his advisers,

David H. Moffat, long a millionaire, has easily made two or more mil-kons out of Cripple Creek. He owns the Florence and Cripple Creek railwhich cost a million, but which paid for itself in six months, and is still making money.

Irving Howbart of Colorado Springs,

the owner of the Anchoria Leland, has made a million.

Eben Smith, Monat's partner, has also made a fortune out of Cripple

J. F. Maynard of Utica, N. Y., paid $1.00 for the Mose mine on Raven Hill. This mine is said to produce now from six to eight thousand dollars a month. An offer of $600,000 has been refused for it, but Maynard and his partners ask $2,000,000.

R. C. Shannon, who beat Amos Cummings for Congress, is said to have made a quarter of a million out of the Anchoria Leland and the Portland, and the El Paso Gold King mine which cost its owners $300, is said to be worth nearly a million.

In short, there are about ten men who have made comething like a milwho have made something like a mil-tion dollars out of Cripple Creek. There are one hundred men who have re than $50,000 apiece and there are perhaps one thousand men who have made $20,000 apiece. Nearly all of this money has gone to Colo-rado people, though the French are now investing largely and have some of the best properties here.
PRANK G. CARPENTER.

(Copyrighted, 1896, by Frank G. Carpenter.) A FINANCIAL SCHOOL FROM FRANCE.

There was no scarcity of money France in the days of the revolution. Bankruptcy, poverty, distress and terror prevailed among the people, but they were never deprived of the blessed privilege of handling large amounts of paper currency, bearing the stamp of the government and sustained by the government with all its power. Ed-mund Burke, though far from being an enemy of liberty, said satirically of their notes, which were called assignats, 'Is there a debt which presses them be fitted out? Assignats." To refuse to accept them for a debt, became a crime amounts of them for certain quantities of goods; the circulation of coin was at last forbidden and the sale of the currency at a discount was made punishable by a term of labor in chains. Yet, with all this fiat money in their hands, the people of France were not happy.

A young American passing an old A young American passing an old book-stall near the Seine in 1872, nobook-stall hear the seine in 1872, no-ticed one of these revolutionary notes among the curiosities for sale, bought it, and, being now a resident of Los Ange-les, has handed it to The Times, and a reduced copy of it is here given.

which were at first made, and when the government continued to issue them in great and increasing amounts, after most of the lands had been sold, so that their value was almost them in great and increasing amounts, after most of the lands had been sold, so that their value was almost wholly that of flat money, substantial and sensible citizens refused to take them except at large and increasing discounts, and all the prisons and galleys in France could not have held any noticeable proportion of those who disobeyed the laws by which the government endeavored to force them on the people. A few years later, the government itself was forced to refuse to accept them, and after a brief experiment with a new and limited issue of paper money, without sufficient basis of value beyond the stamp of the government, a law was passed by which all attempts to restrain the freedom of contract between individuals as to the money to be agreed upon in their transactions, were expressly and finally abandoned.

So, increavery, one of the instances in the force of the stances in the flow of the such an attempt has abandoned.

So, insevery one of the instances in history, in which such an attempt has been made, it has ended in failure. It will be well for the American people. forms, but are even pressed upon courts by great political parties, wh profess to believe that a debt wh the borrower has promised to pay i one kind of money should be held t be payable in any other kind, however be payable in any other kind, however-depreciated, which the government shall declare to be legal tender. Even if it were supposable that the American people should ever so turn their backs upon all fairness and honesty in dealing, history abundantly shows that they would be immensely the losers in the long run. As you may lead your steed to the water, but cannot either cajole or kick him so as to make him drink, if he is not inclined that way, so though you may pass laws that way, so though you may pass law all the year round, aiming to regulate the value of any kind of money or metal, you cannot force any man to part with his property for promises to pay in it, if he does not choose to do The necessary results would be entraction of credit, forced collection contraction of credit, indeed conection of debts in order to escape loss through the depreciation of legal tender, bankruptcy, panic and general distress, which much last until all such legislation should be abandoned. It is lation should be abandoned. It is fortunate that in California, from the days of gold-dust currency and home-made, six-sided gold dollars, there has prevailed a sturdy sentiment in favor a medium of exchange having an intrinsic value as full and substantial as any money in the country. The people of the Union, awake to their true interests and honor, in spite of all the fallacies that smooth-tongued orators will address to them, will speak the same sentiment at the polls next

Handsome Packages. (California Fruit Grower:) handsome packages do not always sell goods, they give a grand impetus to their sale, and of late years the tendency has been toward a steady advance in that direction. Realizing this to the fullest extent, cigar manufacturers, when they find that a particular brand is clinging too tenaciously to their shelves, use strenuous endeavors to adopt some unique, handsome or striking package, and never fall to unload their accumulated stock at better prices than they were asking for them in the plainer package. They have used all kinds of wood fit for the purpose, papier maché, tin, and are now resorting to glass boxes, in which to pack cigars. While we do not wish to advocate this mode of doing business, we simply refer to it as illustrating the point we wish to make, viz. that it is, most frequently, the package which sells the goods. Why, then, is it not possible to utilize this idea in the dried-fruit trade? Neat paper-box packages, containing one, two, three, and even five, pounds of dried fruit, respectively, would certainly serve to display those goods to much better advantage than the tumble-bug mode of packing which now prevails in the dried-fruit industry. These packages would allow of an exercise of individual taste in their preparation and adornment, and would admit of the use of trade marks or firm names, so that each firm engaged in the business would stand prominently behind his product as a guarantor of its excellence. It naturally follows that the best brands, both for excellence of fruit and neatness of package, would their sale, and of late years the ten-

Even the years and months must be changed in name, and in their times of beginning, so that this note, which was issued Jannary 9, 1792, states on its face that it was created on the 18th of Nivose; that is, "the snowy month," in the third year of the French republic. The reading of the note also states that it is lased on the security of the public lands; that the counterfelter will be punished with death, and that the informer will be rewarded. The value represented by it, as shown by the printed matter and by water marks of two kinds, was 1.100, nearly equivalent to 120. Nor would he suffer the waste resulting from the practice indulged in so freely by grocery-store loungers of helping themselves from the sack or box, as the case may be, He would simply hand down the package of the required weight and brand. The grocery-store cat would be knocked out of a soft place of repose; but this fact, and the absence of the dust, grit and foreign substances which will find their way into goods in bulk more or less carelessly covered, would give the consumer a certainty of cleanly, tasteful fruit. The packages need not, necessarily, be expensive, as the manufacturer could emboss upon them, in process of manufacture, what-whatever might be necessary in the way of brand, trademark or name.

THE MONEY QUESTION-III.

THE ACT OF 1873-AN OLD CHARGE REVIVED AND REFUTED.

It was the intention to have taken up entirely new matter in this num-ber. But having seen in the Denver Re-publican of July 28, the old charge rerived against the Forty-second Con gress, of dishonesty and treachery, we decided to devote some time and space the investigation of that charge It has been so persistently reiterated in every political campaign, both on the stump and through the press, that thousands have come to believe it. Individual members of that Congress have, with such persistency, been held have, with such persistency, been held up before the public as worthy only of the execration and contempt of mankind, that a very widespread impression obtains that, though no unfairness was intended, yet at least everything was not done as openly and aboveboard as, considering the importance of the act, it should have been. The writer confesses to have imbibed such an impression years ago. And, although the charge has been openly refuted in the halls of Congress, it is again sought, by designing demagogues, to inflame the minds of the people, with the idea that they were then and there, secretly, covertly and clandestinely wronged and defrauded of their birthright.

Now it is eminently right and proper that the people should have set before them a plain statement of facts that they, once for all, may judge for themselves as to the truth or falsity of these statements. The language in question which is the basis of this article was used by the Wisconsin Silver Democrats in reply to Messrs. Vilas and Bragg, gold Democrats, from which we select the following: "In this latter year (1873) when the attention of the American people was diverted from the subject, dishonest Legislators surreptitiously demonetized silver, the people's money. The importance of gold was increased two-fold as the deup before the public as worthy only of people's money. The importance ogold was increased two-fold as the de mands upon it were doubled." In such connections it is usually asserted as a specification of the above charge, that the original bill contained and retained the old standard dollar right, but at the last reading it was surreptitiously left out. Now for acts: The bill in its original form was facts:

The bill in its original form was first introduced in the Senate April 28, 1870, and after some minor amendments, finally passed the house February 7, 1873, being openly discussed at various times by the Forty-first and Forty-second Congresses for a period of nearly three years. Quoting from a speech by the Hon. J. T. McCleary: "It was printed eleven times separately and twice in the reports of the Comproller of the Currency. It was carefully debated in both houses, the debates in the Senate occupying sixty-six column, and those in the House occupying seventy-eight columns, of the Congressional Globe."

And to show the plain, outspoken, unequivocal stand taken by those having charge of 'the bill, we will quote Mr. Stoughton, in April, 1872, (vol. 102, p. 2608.) In explaining the provisions of the pending bill he says: "The only change in the present law is in more clearly specifying the gold doflar as the unit of value. This was probably the intention of, and perhaps the effect of, the act of March the 3d, 1894; but it ought not to be left to inference or implication. The value of silver depends in a great measure upon the fluctuations of the market and the supply and demand. Gold is practically the standard of value among all civilized nations, and the time has come in this country when the gold dollar should be distinctly declared to be the coln representative of the money unit."

On the same day Mr. Hooper, as was quoted in my article No. 11, said: "I repeat, in reply to the gentleman, we propose to make the silven subservient to

A STEP BACKWARD.

The most discouraging feature about the idea of free coinage of silver at a fixed ratio, and the strongest argumen igainst it is that it is not a new untried project. After a thorough test of more than a century it has been weighed in the balance of nations and found wanting. If the lessons of history have any value whatever, we do not have to speculate or conjecture as to the result of free coinage. We know with as absolute a certainty what will happen as regards the two coins as that we know that water, unobstructed, will run down hill. In the event of free coinage, at the 16-to-1 ratio, unless the price of silver bullion in the world's market is raised from what it is now, about 65 cents, to $1.29 per ounce, it will drive out gold, the latter going to a premium, becoming a commodity used for hoarding and speculation, and no longer as a currency.

Let no one mistake this for theory; it is law, as invariable as the law of incidence and reflection, or gravitation. The law is this:

First—The buillon price of silver and gold, like other commodities, is reguuntried project. After a thorough test

lated by the cost of production, supply

Second—With an open mint to both metals, the cheaper invariably drives out the dearer. So that, if this mighty nation in performing the great Archimedean feat, with a lever of sentiment and a fulcrum of theory, of raising the market price of silver to $1.23, thus doubling the value of all the silver in the world, should exert just a little to much power and raise the price to about $1.33, the result would be just as fatal to practical hametallism; for then silver becomes dearer than gold, takes on a premium, goes out of sight, and the result, gold monometallism. But, if through any failure to properly adjust the lever and fulcrum aforesaid, the price failed to reach $1.23, though it should lack but a trifle—three or four cents—it would be just as fatal to real bimetallism, and the result, silver monometallism, and the result, silver monometallism. From these conclusions there is no escape. J. C. OLIVER.

WARNING OF WINDOM.

HIS LAST WORDS AGAINST THE SILVER EXPERIMENT.

following is an extract from the last address of William Windom, then Secretary of the Treasury, made at New York City, January 29, 1891: "As poison in the blood permeates arteries, veins, nerves, brain and heart, and speedily brings paralysis or death, so does a debased or fluctuating cur-rency permeate all the arteries of trade, paralyze all kinds of business, and bring disaster to all classes of peo ple. Such a currency is bad enough in domestic trade, but it is absolutely fatal to the prosperity of foreign com-merce. The nation that attempts to merce. The nation that attempts to conduct its foreign trade with a cur-rency of uncertain value, or of inferior quality, is placed at a fearful disadvantage. It would seem superfluous to impress this universal and wellto impress this universal and well-known experience were it not too apparent that this nation has been in danger of repeating the costly experiment with just such a currency. The tendency of events has recently been in that direction, and the apprehension of danger created thereby has caused the loss, since December 1, of over $24,000,000 of gold from the treasury, and of probably a much larger amount from one obs, since December 1, or over $24,000,000 of gold from the treasury, and of probably a much larger amount from the circulation.

"Let me speak very plainly on this most important subject. Believing that there is not enough of either gold or silver in the world to meet the necessities of business, I am an earnest bimetallist, and concede to no one a stronger desire than I feel for the free and unlimited coinage of silver, as soon as conditions can be reached, through international agreement or otherwise, by which such coinage shall be safe.
But it is my firm conviction that for this country to enter upon that experiment now, and under existing conditions, would be extremely disastrous, and that it would, in my judgment, and that it would, in my judgment, prove a greater disappointment to its advocates than anyone else. They insist that it would expand the circulathat it would expand the circulation, and permanently enhance the value of silver. I believe it would produce a swift and severe contraction, and eventually reduce the market value of silver. Let me briefly suggest some of my reasons for this belief:

lief:

"Free and unlimited coinage of silver by the United States, while the other great nations pursue an opposite policy, would invite all the owners of that metal throughout the world to exchange 3714 grains of pure silver, worth about 83 cents (now about 53 cents) for 23.22 grains of pure gold, worth everywhere 100 cents. Nearly all the nations of Europe are anxious to exchange their silver for gold, and they would at once accept so tempting an offer. The mint statistics of the Treasury Department show that the stock of full legal tender silver in Europe amounts to $1,101,400,000, and that of this amount the banks of France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, the Netherlands and Belgium hold $428,856,665. A large part of these vast stocks of silver would be ready for transfer to us at once, and the swiftest steamers would be employed to deliver it to the treasury, in order that with the proceeds the owners might buy gold exchange on Europe before our stock of gold should be exhausted. "Would our people await the arrival of these silver argosies from Europe before acting? Not unless the Yankee "Free and unlimited coinage of silver

"Would our people await the arrival of these silver argosies from Europe before acting? Not unless the Yankee has lost his quick scent of danger and forgotten his cunning. Bank depositors, trust companies, the holders of United States notes and gold certificates, would instantly lock up all the gold at command, and then join the panic-inspired procession to the treasury, each and all anxious to be in time to grasp the golden prize before it is too late. Probably before the swiftest ocean greyhound could land its silver cargo in New York the last gold dollar within reach would be safely hidden within reach would be safely hidden away in private boxes and in the vaults of safe deposit companies, to be brought out only by a high premium for exportation. This sudden retirement of $600,000,000 of gold, with the accompany-ing usarie would cause contraction and commercial disaster unparalleled in hu-man experience; and our country would ing manic would cause contraction and commercial disaster unparalleled in human experience; and our country would at once slip down to the silver basis, when there would be no longer any inducement for coinage, and silver dollars would sink to their buillon value. "When the silver dollar ceases to have more value than the buillon it contains, there will be little inducement to coin our own silver, and the cost of transportation will prevent its coming from abroad. How, then, will unlimited coinage either expand the circulation or enhance the value of silver?

"As if determined to omit nothing which might accelerate these results, the advocates of present free coinage insist that it shall not await the slow process of mint operations, but that the printing press shall be set to work providing silver certificates to be issued for buillon at one dollar for 3714 grains. When this consummation shall be reached, as surely it will be if unlimited coinage be adopted under existing conditions (conditions are worse now,) the too ardent and impetuous lovers of silver will sadly realize the truth uttered by the wise King of Israel: "He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver."

California Walnuts not English.
(California Fruit Grower:) We note with pleasure that one of our exchanges which worthly bears the name of the Sonoma County Farmer, is urging the general use of the name of "California" walnuts instead of "Euglish" walnuts, which seems to be in common use with some people; but the Farmer is in error in supposing that the name "Euglish walnuts" is in general use or used by the trade. It is safe to say that for ten years or more, these nuts have been and are now sold by the trade at home and in the Eastern States, as California walnuts, if the nuts were grown in this State. However, we are glad to lend a hand in popularizing the name of "California" walnuts among the people of this country, and we trust that all trade and fruit journals will adopt this name when making references to this noble nut. California Wainuts not English.

Paychologic Piction.

WHOSE SOUL HAVE I NOW? By Mary Clay Knapp. (Boston: Arena Publishing Company.)

With a great deal of care and a good deal of scientific accuracy the author of this most interesting novel has developed in it her theories of thought transference, and the power of mind to dominate mind. Aside from its psychic aspect, the plausibility of which can hardly be questioned in this era of the supremacy of minds, there is much strength in the history of the development of a character under a ent of a character under a life of suffering.

Again and again has it been proved that the true self is discovered only after the struggle with agony has sent forth a purified and exalted soul, ready not only to endure life, but to find it was a pursuely feeding. not only to endure life, but to find it sweet. Though apparently feeding upon self, giving all and gaining nothing, as did the "Margaret" of the book, sorrow gives us new and wonderful capacities. The ideal and spiritual in Margaret Livingston's nature far exceeded the material development, and suffering only served to accentuate these; but her intimate association with these; but her intimate association with the materialist, Fitzhugh, is the means while she gives much, as such a mental organism must, she attains also something of that humanness which is necessary for the best world's work.

The arguments for pure and true marriage throughout the book are of he most elevated order. The letter of sabel Desschler to her husband, Flizugh, is a powerful commentary on the high nature of the duties which marriage involves, and an eloquent plea for ourity and sincerity of motive in approaching that step.

Hawaii is the scene of the story and he time that of the revolution. Delight-ul descriptive passages are scattered hrough the book, relieving what might therwise be a too philosophic trend,

THE MADEIRA ISLANDS. By Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, author of "A Dual Roll and Other Stories," "An Allegory and Three Essays," etc., etc. (Philadelphia: Drexel Biddle & Bradley Publishing Company.)

Books of travel sometimes avail but with a largerity a correct knowledge.

tle in imparting a correct knowledge the countries of which they treat, but little in imparting a correct knowledge of the countries of which they treat, but the book before us is an exception to this rule, and the very atmosphere, conditions and life of the country are so fully drawn that they leave a very vivid impress upon the mind of the reader.

Mr. Biddle has won a wide reputation as a writer, and the original grace of his diction is altogether charming. The pleasing text of this volume is supplemented by twenty-seven full-page illustrations, a map of Funchal, and one of the Island of Madeira, showing districts devoted to vine culture, and contains much useful information for the traveler and visitor. Among its many interesting features is the chapter devoted to Madeira's attitude toward the English and Americans respectively, and it is gratifying to American vanity to learn of the large faith which these simple islanders have in the people of this free land. The book cannot fail to interest its readers.

A Strange Tale.

THE STRANGE SCHEMES OF RAN-DOLPH MASON. By Melville Davis-son Post. (New York and London: G. P. Putnam's Sons.) No better idea of the object and char-scer of this volume of short stories.

No better idea of the object and character of this volume of short stories can be given than that which is given by the author in his introduction, in which explains that writers, one and all, have labored, often with great genius, to construct problems in crime, where by acute deduction the criminal and his methods were determined, or, reversing it, they have sought to plan the crime so cunningly as to effectually conceal the criminal and his methods. The intent has always been to baffle the traitor, and when the identity of the criminal was finally revealed, the story ended.

the criminal was finally revealed, the story ended.

The high ground of crime has not been explored. No writer has attempted to construct tales based upon plans whereby the punishing power of the State might be baffled. Thus, one who knows well the technicalities of the law, may commit horrible wrongs that will yield all the gain and all the resulting effect of the highest crimes, and yet the wrongs perpetrated will constitute no one of the crimes described by the law; therefore the law cannot punish him. This is the field into which the author has ventured, and it is a new one and full of interest, and will prove to the reader a marvelous revelation of the many doors open for the escape of the criminal, and the ease with which crime often escapes its just punishment.

A Pretty Romance.

SHE FELL IN LOVE WITH HER HUSBAND. By E. Werner. (Chi-cago and New York: Rand, McNally & Co.)
Mankind is the same the world over, and positive goodness is never without its attractions. A manly man must always be an object of admiration to the womanly woman. This story is the old story which is by no means uncommon, especially in the old world, of the marriage of convenience, made for the purpose of keeping up the name and fame of some old aristocratic family, and in the compact love plays no part. But in this instance, though the marriage was a loveless one, love came later, and the sanctity and the happiness of the marriage relation where the element of true affection enters into it, is most fully illustrated. The plot is well drawn and skillfully handled, so that there is no lack of exciting interest in the well-constructed tale. ositive goodness is never without

The general reader cannot fail of being interested in 'he well arranged variety that is offered him in the Peterson Magazine, so full of charming illustrations, glimpses of foreign places and pleasant fiction. Old Rome is made familiar, and Anna L. Wetmore Smith conducts the reader through the wonders of the Vatican and reveals the glories of St. Peters; and we are introduced to "Americans in Jerusalem" by the United States Consul, while the issue contains much else of general interest.

We turn the pages of Lippincott's with considerable interest and find into them the usual amount of fiction, the monthly variety in prose and verse. The complete novel, which is full of incident and startling situations, is entitled "The Great K. and A Train Robbery," and is from the pen of Paul Leicester Ford, and is worthy of note for its dramatic power and interest. The number is a good one.

LITERARY COMMENT.

Mrs. Burnett's Next Novel. (Edward W. Bok in New York Com-mercial Advertiser:) Mrs. Burnett is now engaged upon a new novel, which, as she says, 'is interesting me very much, even more so than did 'A Lady of Quality.'" It is too far in the fu-ture to say anything definite about this much, even more so than did 'A Lady of Quality.'" It is too far in the future to say anything definite about this new story. Naturally, the public will be curious to see whether this novel will follow the lines of "A Lady of Quality," or whether Mrs. Burnett will try to pacify her old constituency by returning to her former style of book. The new novel was thought out before "Little Lord Fauntleroy" was written. It will be American in theme. No time has been set for the completion of the new book. It will probably be issuedirst as a serial. This is due possibly to the offers which come almost weekly to Mrs. Burnett from all sorts of publishers for her next book. For if "A Lady of Quality" has not enhanced Mrs. Burnett's reputation among her "Faunt'eroy" clientele, it seems to have had the opposite effect on publishers, who are making the authoress the most flattering offers for her next book. And this appeals to Mrs. Burnett. I mean by this that the material side of a literary transaction has its undoubted attraction for her.

Mrs. Burnett is fond of good living and indulyes her tastes. Her home in London is an expensive one to maintain. Young Fauntleroy is now a Harvard student in his sophmore year, and naturally the mother wishes to give her son the best education within her power. She has already made a goodly sum out of "A Lady of Quality," and she is destined to make more out of the play. It is keeping within the conservative bounds to say that "Little Lord Fauntleroy" meant at least $100.000 to Mrs. Burnett in royalties from book and play. If she makes $25,000 out of "A Lady of Quality," it will not be at all surprising; she may exceed that sum, for, after the play has been produced in America, it will be given in England in time for the next London "season." So that with her new book selling well the prospect of good dramatic royalties in America and England, and a new novel under way, Mrs. Burnett is just now seeing a very pleasant outlook ahead of her, so far as material prospects are concerned.

(New York Tribune:) It makes a lover edition of Chaucer—the-so-cost be-inaccessible one with the edition of Chaucer—the-so-costly-as-tobe-inaccessible sone with the BurneJones illustrations—and now among other enterprises he announces a new edition of Froissart, in Lord Berners's translation. O literature! O printers!
A Froissart that might be superbly in his neo-mediaeval way and turn out a production which every one will like to look at and no one will like to read.

We have not yet seen a volume from the Kelmscott Press that it was a

In the British Weekly of July 16 I find, over the signature of Claudius Clear, a three-column letter on the the writer frankly avows in his first sentence, and by circulation he means merit, for "contemporary judgment is right and not wrong," he declares, "and large sales are a prima facle evidence of merit and not demerit." It is safe to say that an article on successful novel-writing by a ment is right and not wrong, he declares, "and large sales are a prima facie evidence of merit and not demerit." It is safe to say that an article on successful novel-writing by so experienced a judge as Dr. Nicoll will be wide reading; yet it is equally true that no one after reading it will be more likely to write a successful novel than he was before. For, after all is said, the secret of success is incommunicable or, at least, is incommunicable to any one who could not discover it without help.

According to Mr. Clear there are various pathways to success in story-writing. One is the production of a fairly-good historical novel, a market for books of this kind having been created by "the energy of Mr. Weyman and others;" another is the writing of a Scotch novel, Mr. Barrie having paved the way to a certain audience for "kallyard literature," as it is sometimes called. The "sex novel" bade fair a while ago to be a thing to conjure with, but it is already losing its little vogue. "Certain clever tradesmen manage to pass off obscenity in the guise of prophetic earnestness," but the trick has been found out. The writing of "treatises on religion and socialism and morality in the guise of fiction-writing appears to be an obvious one; for "any excellent story-teller will succeed." If he can not only tell a story well, but "construct a good plot," he is "independent of the critics."

The marriage of Clement K. Shorter, editor of the Illustrated London News and the Sketch, to Miss Dora Sigerson of Dublin, was celebrated very quietly in London on the 9th ult. for nearly a year while he was with the British troops, who were chasing Arab slave-traders.

The late Anson D. F. Randolph is spoken of as "The hero of the book trade." It is a fact that few men in the trade occupied the position held by Mr. Randolph in the hearts of his associates, and few men have had more opportunity to show their feeling of brotherhood than Mr. Randolph on the many occasions of joy and sorrow, when the book trade has been gathered together. He was esteemed one of the most finished speakers and most warmly apprelative authorities among the fraternity. He seems to have hed in a remarkable degree the talent, geniality and tact to bind his friends to him. He died at a good old age honored and loved even by multitudes who had never known him personally.

The one thing which it is impossible to understand in the talk of those writers. English and American, but especially English, who have written sedate paragraphs over Mrs. Stowe's death, is that one and all they should use the patronizing fone they do. They tell you "Uncle Tom" was a good action rather than a good book, and similar illuminating things. This is ridiculous. The book is much more than a good action; it is a well-told story, and there is something irritating in the constant iteration of the old cant that it is a polemic, not literature. Suppose it isn't? It is much nearer literature than scores of books printed every year in the degraded name of "authorship."

But in an interview in the Figaro he remarks that he does not at present see clearly how he can represent the Pope and Cardinals on the stage without incurring the risk of a diplomatic incident with Italy, Little would then remain but the scene of poisoning by figs, which would furnish matter for but a slender play. Cut down in such a fashion, M. Zola thinks, his book would be deprived of its essential purpose.

How McKinley, Bryan, Cleveland, Sherman, Reed, Sewall and Hobart Greet Their Men and Brothers—Morton as Governor.

(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—I once heard John Sherman make a rousing political speech in Faneuil Hall. At its close he bitterly deprecated, to the men around him on the platform, the disagreeable custom of shaking hands with complete strangers.

Two minutes afterward a line of men and brothers were filing across the stage and sturdy old John S. was greeting each as he passed with an appearance of fervor wonderfully well assumed. Yet in the light of the remark I had overheard I could penetrate the disguise and note the underlying weariness.

John Sherman is one of the pleasantest men in public life to meet when you really know him and he cares to tunbend, but with strangers he is always on his guard. There is at such times no magnetism in his smile or voice, little warmth in the grip of his thin, sinewy hand. His personally appeals to the head rather than the heart of the average man.

There died the other day a Massachusetts man so exactly the opposite the way, was not so wonderful but that he was willing to supplement it. When entering a town he would ask questions of those who met him, refreshing his memory of places and people, to be used later with telling effect. Until his later years of illness and disappointment he was a man whom it was a pleasure to meet. Like his chief, Garfield, his handgrasp was that of a warm, full-blooded, strong, human man. After all, there is no better word to describe it than the muchabused "magnetic." Garfield's was a bigger and stronger hand than Blaine's, but there was much similarity in their greeting.

Because of the speech he made and the momination that followed, Bryan's has been often compared to Garfield, Comparison with McKinley would be more to the point. Bryan's nature is more exuberant, McKinley's more resules.

It is unnecessary to add—or ought to be—that no man in politics ever dreams of meeting another with the hand held at the level of the mose ready for the high society handshake which is—or was; fashions change rapidly—a sort of a sidewise wobble. That kind of thing wouldn't be exactly a vote-getter.

I don't think that one of the men I have named eved overdoes the handshake; ever slops over and becomes effusive and gushing. Without manliness, which in Anglo-Saxon lands implies some self-restraint, one does not go far in politics. OWEN, LANGDON. (Conyright, 1896, by the Bachellor Syndicate.)

of John Sherman that, at 39, he had become the foremost New England leader of a great party, largely by virtue of his handshaking gifts.

No one ever called John Sherman "Jack" or "Johnny." Few knew ex-Gov. William E. Russell at all well who did not think of him as "Billy."

The precaution of grapsing the other fellow by the ends of the fingers, by the way, is common to all experienced handshakers. It won't do—if he is President—to let too many people squeeze and crush one's hand if one wants to retain the use of it for fishing rod or pen. "Jack" or "Johnny." Few knew exGov. William E. Russell at all well

And no one ever heard him regret the necessity of meeting the plain, average citizen and grasping his hand, because he enjoyed it. He had the said of him in exaggeration that he could make a speech in a town, meet visit was made to meet him personally.

Not so much of an exaggeration, either, when you look at the results:

'Russell became Mayor of Cambridge people; became personally popular from the Berkshires to Norman's Woe; ran for Governor and was defeated;

met more people; ran again and was defeated with greater difficulty; met more people; ran again and was elected and remained Governor as long as he wished; and was at 29 a prominent Presidential possibility—this was a more wonderful career than anyone could have called Bryan's a month ago.

It is not belittling Russell's un-

Cleveland's hand is distinctly fat and broad, almost flabby. In weather at all warm it exudes perspiration rapidly and is moist to the touch. Seldom does a smile rest upon the rather sad and stern features of the Chief Magistrate as he greets a stranger. In Washington people, excepting the President, get less pumphandling than might be supposed. There are forty-five States. People come from each of them. Each shakes the President by the hand, and perhaps one of the Senators from his own State; perhaps his Representatives. "We have seventy-five feet of tunnel," said he, "and have not yet reached the hanging wall. We are just quarrying the mineral out, We have a ten-stamp mill in operation, the ore running $9 to $45 per ton, much of it magnetic iron. The ore is mainly quartzite and sulphides for concentration. No development has been made below the water level, and we are not able to tell what is the condition of the property, but we do know that we have a vein which is not less than 450 feet long, and perhaps 200 feet wide. There is no difficulty about fixing the value of the district on a conservative basis. Everybody who has examined it is satisfied 'that it is one of the best ever discovered either in New Mexico or Colorado and if the ore holds out as at present, there is no doubt of it. ## SANTA TERESE.

Story of the Famous Mexican Joan of Arc.

Her Life, Personality, Methods and Charitable Work.

A Sketch of Nogales on Both Sides of the Line—Curious Juxtaposition of Different Nationalities—Expa-triation of the Mexican Saintess.

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.)

Nogales, the town recently attacked by the Yaqui Indians, is situated in a low range of mountains near the source of the Santa Cruz River, about seventyfive miles south of Tucson, on the in-ternational boundary line, about half the town being on either side of that line. The population, which is about three thousand is also about equally divided in nationality, and in character are decidedly of the frontier type. A few old Californians of sporting incli-nation may be found there, the most notable among them being Pedro Badillo (Six-toed Pete,) one of the game sports of Los Angeles during the sixsports of Los Angeles during the six-ties, and later engaged in an unsuc-cessful revolt against the Mexclan gov-ernment, after proclaiming himself Governor of Sonora. Although Pete's hair is now as white as snow, he yet turns the cards with nimble fingers, and will bet 500 "dobles" (Mexican dol-lars,) on a rooster fight, as he did in early times.

the Ferro Carril de Sonora, which are practically the same road, and the United States and Mexican customhouse constitute the resources of the town. The gamblers and saloon-keepers keep the money in circulation, and every one seems to have a few "dobles" in their pockets. International street, the principal street, running east and west, divides the two countries, the line being on the north side of the street, so near the walls of the buildings that it was necessary to cut into the side of the International saloon to make room for the new iron monument placed there by the boundary commission. The sidewalk belonging to this building is entirely in Mexico, and the enterprising saloon-keeper takes advantage of this convenient situation to turn an honest penny by saving duty the enterprising saloon-keeper takes advantage of this convenient situation to turn an honest penny by saving duty on Mexican cigars, which he keeps for sale on the outer edge of the sidewalk, where the customer helps himself to a cigar, after paying the barkeeper in the United States for it, at the same time chatting pleasantly with our customhouse guard while he slyly winks at the Mexican official on the other side. The well which belongs to this enterprising establishment is entirely in Mexico, and the water, which is of the finest quality, seems to mix equally well with Mexican mescal and Arizona or export duty to Mexico. Much has been written and said about this somewhat interesting saloon. It was here that the music stand was built on top of the old and partly demolished stone monument where the musicians sat directly over the boundary line and filled the room with the concord of sweet sounds to cheer the winners while the barkeeper prescribed a remedy for those who could not guess it right at Mexican monte, or "call the turn" in faro.

It is but justice also to note that excellent free schools are maintained by both countries, and the number of portraits of Mexican celebrities that hang on the walls of the Mexican school rooms shows that patriotism is early instilled into the minds of the Mexicans. Nogales on the Mexican side is the same in character as other Mexican towns. The houses are built of adobe generally only one-story bigh and generally only one-story high, and many of them have the usual mud roofs so common in that country. Al-though the real Mexican costume is not so much worn in Nogales as it is further south, the broad-brimmed som-brero and high-colored costumes are much in vogue.

The Mexicans are intensely conservative and show no inclination to change their methods. The Mexican peon is contented with his condition and does not cudgel his brains about new inventions or the changes in the styles of dress. He wears his shose with rawhide soles, the same as he did a hundred years ago, without a thought of higher heels or sharper toes, and his serape thrown about his shoulders is perfection, according to their ideas of comfort and style. They celebrate their periodical flestas the same as they did in olden times, and would revolt against the idea of letting a fiesta day pass without the usual ceremonies and festive sports.

The Mexican custom-houseat Nogales, which was attacked by the Yaquis, is the largest of any west of El Paso and its the finest of their buildings along the entire line, being the Ferro Carril de Sonora, one of the two railroads running south into Mexico. It is next in importance to the one at Juarez, opposite El Paso. A sufficient force of rurales is kept at this point by the Mexican government to protect their country from smugglers, but the recent attack by Indians was something so unusual that they deserve credit for repulsing them so promptly when their literature in Iowa, and this is having a telling effect.

surprise must have been complete. The Mexican ruralesare men of fine appearance. They are brave fighters, dead shots with their large pistols, and when mounted are dangerous enemies. Their business generally is to patrol the line and look out for smugglers, whom they frequently encourage until they accumulate sufficient goods to make their capture profitable, when they confiscate the contraband property and let the prisoner go, with the hope that he will continue in the same business.

They take especial delight in capturing miners who try to escape with their gold, to become goldbugs in the United States; without paying the 10 per cent. export duty on that coveted metal, the love of which seems now more than ever to be the root of all evil. During the present excitement, however, the smugglers will prebably have what might be called a walkover while the rurales are kept busy on the lookout for the fanatical Yaquis, who it seems are now under the influence of a superstitious craze which frequently becomes so intense in the Indian mind that death loses its terrors and the severest torture has no effect.

SANTA TERESE.

SANTA TERESE. Terese Amada de Cabora, the inno-cent cause of the recent trouble in No-gales, is a young Mexican woman about 25 years of age, quite beautiful, according to the Mexican idea. Her long, heavy auburn hair and dreamy eyes give her a distinguished appear-ance. She is quite intelligent, very mod-est and unassuming, and laughed according to the Mexican idea. Her long, heavy auburn hair and dreamy eyes give her a distinguished appearance. She is quite intelligent, very modest and unassuming, and laughed heartily at the idea of being called a saint. She only claims to be a Christian healer, and her sole aim in life seems to be to cure the infirmities of those who are afflicted. Her treatment is given gratuitously, as she believes that to receive pay would destroy her power to heal. She seems to want but little of this world's goods, and the young lady of divine power and her aged father, who generally remains with her, live from donations given by those who believe in her healing powers, and they are always well supplied. When I had the pleasure of visiting this farfamed young lady she was living in a tule hut about eighteen miles from Nogales, on the road leading toward Tucson, and was surrounded by many admiring friends and also many suffering patients, to whom she was, as usual, giving gratuituous treatment. She chatted pleasantly in her own language, and semed to appreciate the magnanimity of the Americanos who allow her to remain in their country since she had been banished from her native home, which is a little town called Alamo Bonito, in Sonora, from which place she was escorted across the line at Nogales on June 7, 1892, by Mexican troops and ordered not to return to Mexico. She seems to take much pleasure in obeying this order, which has given her so much fame.

This action og the part of the Mexican government was caused by fear of a rebellion smong the Yaquis, a very powerful nation of Indians, over whom Santa Terese had obtained complete control on account of her healing powers, so much show to that they regarded her. Their recent action in attacking the town of Nogales with such weak force shows to what extent their fanaticism has carried them, and possibly, the end is not yet. However, the recent action of President Diaz, when he sent a deputation to invite her to return to Mexico, shows that he believes a mistake has be thing to help Bryan, because if they yote for a third ticket it is half a vote for some other crime in a country where a prisoner may be marched out and shot without trial by a jury of his countrymen. This has frequently happened on the Mexican side.

On either side of the line business are regulated acordingly, but gold and United States silver coin is received by all, and at present double value is allowed for both. The gaming tables also do a large money changing business, but they prefer the Mexican dollar for gambling to the lvory cheque which is generally in use, and the lucky sport frequently finds it necessary to borrow a good-sized sack to carry home his money.

It is but justice also to note that excellent free schools are maintained by both countries, and the number of portraits of Mexican celebrities that hang on the walls of, the Mexican school rooms shows that patriotism is early instilled into the minds of the Mexicans, Nogales on the Mexican side is the

the poor house, as for the folks to expect to be supported by the government.

"If Bryan should be elected the first thing that would happen would be a great panic. Gold would go out of circulation and all the interests of the people would suffer to the last degree. The nation would be dishonored, our credit would be lost and the bonds of the United States would drop to their value in silver. Railroad companies would be unable to pay their interest in gold and for the first time in our history we would know what hard times really were. We have had hard times since 1893 and will have them as long as the Democratic party is in power. "If think it was a mistake to demonstize silver, but it is a mistake that this country cannot correct, consequently we must stand by gold. A nation must preserve its honor and its credit. When the money of a nation is at a discount its people are below par, so I am for gold. If we have silver dollars, I want a dollar's worth of silver, no matter if it weighs a pound."

When asked what he thought of Cleveland's silence, Col. Ingersoil said: "I think Cleveland appears at his best when he is silent."

Col. Ingersoil was firm in his belief that McKinley would be the next President and he is an ardent admirer of the champion of gold and protection.

I wakened early Wednesday morning and the cool, delicious atmosphere of the young morning stole in through my open window, making the temperature of my room the perfection of comfort. The birds were warbling in all the tree tops about the house, flitting from majestic peppers, all sunlight at their tops, and gleaming like polished emer-alds, to the more somber palms and cedars, amid whose boughs they twit-tered as if discussing the loveliness of

Before my window the orange tree waved its green boughs laden with rich fruitage for the coming year, and golden-winged butterflies seemed at home amid its branches. The tall umbrella tree, just beyond, was full of blossoms, and it spread its sheltering boughs above the very roof of my dwelling. Farther away the apricot, the walnut and the fig tossed their green plumes and drank in the wine of the cool morning air which nourishes their perpetual growth and beauty. I was so full of comfort and the world was so full of beauty I could not help exclaiming, "What a glorious world this is, and what a delight there is in mere existence."

But when I was up and dressed, I took my morning Times and saw the other side of the picture, when I read: "Greater New York's Heat Victims—People Carried Off as if by an Epidemic—Total Number of Deaths One Hundred and Fifty." And that in New York and its suburban towns alone in a single twenty-four hours! Think of it!

I could see in fancy a great, perspiring city, panting, dripping with moisture, and breathing air as hot as if from a furnace. Night had brought no coolness, and its heavy black wings drooped over the pulseless world like the wings of some merciless demon. With the rising of the sun the hot air grew hotter and the burden of life heavier. The poor laborer went out upon the streets and dropped in his tracks, smitten by the terrible heat. Women fainted upon the sidewalks and behind the counter. The sick moaned with added suffering caused by the torrid temperature, and the wind forgot to blow. Patient horses dropped upon the streets at almost every corner, and the ambulances to gather up the prostrated and the dead were met with everywhere, while the pittless sun poured down his scorching beams like an avalanche of death.

This is the picture that was spread before my mental vision while sitting on my cool, vine-curtained veranda on Wednesday morning, with the delicious breezes, full of balm and coolness, stirring the thousands of leaves to musical whispers, and the sunlight outside falling in a golden glory upon the grass. Comparing the two pictures, I could but exclaim, "What a contrast between California and the East! The man who finds fault with this climate ought to be sent to purgatory. He would be a disturbing element anywhere else, and there disturbances are the normal element. "Let him git!"

ing young lady behind the counter should have that others have not, un-less it is to slap such customers in the face," she added with a smile.

How true it is that "One-half of the world does not know how the other half lives." I was out one day among the poorer homes of Lcs Angeles and I found houses with whole families living in a single room, children whose only playground was the street or a cheerless court, into which the sun only looked for a few hours each day, and then left it, as if frightened by its mustiness and foul dors. There was a sick man in one room, and there all the work of the household had to be done, cooking, washing, ironing and all else, and the sun never looked through its one window. I pitted him, helped him what I could, but after a little I learned his history. He was a Mormon, had seven wives, several of them sisters, but of course he brought but one of them to Los Angeles. The rest of them are scattered about somewhere in the wide world, bearing his name, but homeless and childless. The one with him followed him about with dog-like devotion, and but for her he would have been alone and uncared for in a city of strangers. She was not pretty, though she might once have been, but she looked haggard and careworn. There was love and tenderness in her manner toward him, but nothing responsive to it in his treatment of her. He is dead now, and, woman-like, she mourns him. The Saunterer wonders what the after-life of such men must be. Does heaven open its gates to them with wide, expansive doors, and bld them enter? Does it seem fitting that it should?

The discussion of the free-sliver question goes merrily on even among the small boys on our streets. There was a war of words which took place one day last week between two scions of American nobility, which, to say the least, was amusing. Little Johnnie had heard his father discuss the advantages of free silver until his juvenile soul was filled with glittering anticipations of an abundance of coin with which to purchase ice cream, marbles, kites and pet dogs ad limitum and ad infinitum. It was a paradise that opened before his imagination after next November, and with the impatience of childhood he was waiting to enter it.

"If Bryan is "lected papa says we shall have all the money we want—silver dollars will be just as plenty as stones after awhile."

"Bosh!" replied James, with a look of infinite disgust, "my papa says its a lot of measly fools like your papa that's talking 'bout free silver. I'd rather have fewer dollars and have 'em all worth a dollar, than to have a whole pocket full of free-silver dollars that ain't worth but 50 cents."

"Is that all they'll be worth?" asked Johnnie, dublously.

"Yes, sirree, and 10 cents won't be worth but 5 cents, and 50 cents only 25 I s'pose. An' we'll have to pay twice as much for everything we buy," said James, who had evidently been well indoctrinated, "an' what's the wussest part on't is they say Bryan is nothing but a boy. Papa says boys are all right enough in their places, but we don't want one for President."

"None of that in mine," responded Johnnie, who evidently was mentally forsaking the political faith of his father.

"Well, you needn't worry" said.

Johnnie, who evidently was mentally forsaking the political faith of his father.

"Well, you needn't worry." said staunch little Jamie, "for McKinley is going to be our next President, sure. I'll bet ye sixteen to one on that, and then there won't be any bosh about our sliver dollars—they'll be worth a hundred cents, every one of them, instead of a measily 50 cents, and the country will be a lots richer, too. Hurrah for McKinley!" and the young patriot tossed his hat into the air and kicked at an imaginary Billy Bryan, who he remarked was "a no-account Populist, anyhow, and not so good as a decent Democrat, who wouldn't pretend he was something else, for the sake of getting 'lected President."

After a somewhat lengthy polishing of "Billy," the boys dropped their political wrangle, and, like wise young Americans, departed amicably together for a game of ball.

The Saunterer could but appreciate the fact that the present campaign is an educational one, and the small boy—the future citizen of the republic, is listening with wide-open ears to all that is being said pro and con on the financial issues of the day.

The republic is growing—it does not stand still, and out of this political confusion and unrest will be evolved the thinking, sovereign citizen, whose vote will represent not unreasoning prejudice, but honest principle. The way may be long, but that is coming.

The past week of heat at the East has been like the march of a mighty-pestilence, or of a great, merciless army with dead and dying everywhere along its wake. Since Wednesday, when the Saunterer noted the death record in New York, the list has piled up daily, till the battalions of dead are ready for their graves, and woward of a thousand in Greater New York alone have been slain by the fierce heat, and the wail of sorrow and suffering is everywhere heard. Let us be thankful, as never before, that such conditions do not obtain here; that we live where physical comfort is possible at all times in a land of coolness and colossal calm. in a land of coolness and colossal calm.

THE SAUNTERER.

LOTUS LEAVES.

In The Times of August 1 The Eagle soars right into the inner sanctuary of truth and yanks the timid maiden out by the ear. Shake, Eagle; you're a wise bird.

It has been said that the most pro-nounced characteristic in the nature of mankind is the desire to love something. However true the saying may be, it is a palpable fact, that, in the Democratic party this prospensity is superseded and dwafed into utter insignificance by the overwhelming de-sire to agitate.

As a great political organization the Democratic party possesses many grand and patriotic principles, but history truthfully portrays it as being from time to time dominated by a wild-eyed frantic faction, the blight of whose touch breeds festering so cial disorders, destroying the healthy tone of the whole civic and moral structure, and finally developing acute agitation, ending in Debism and Cox-eyism, with their attendant train of social disruptions, financial panics and incipient revolutions. Of these dire incipient revolutions. Of these dire factors menacing our government, one class' belongs to the breed of avowed political agitators, who bray for effect, and make a livelihood by the process.

Closely allied to this class are the weak-minded, chronic "reformers" (?) who follow the asinine cue and agitate in sympathy. These have no fixed principles. Political buzzards are they, content to ignore the pure things which wisdom and foresign have provided for them, but ever ready to go croaking away after every foul stench that comes reeking down the wind. The third class imitates the unreasoning frenzy of a child who writhes upon the floor in an ectasy of rage, shrieking for pie, when there is no pie.

Evidently the Democratic party has to faith in the maxim of Uncle Gabe: "De boy ain't gwine ter projeck wif de fiah wen he done bu'n his hands." With the disastrous result of the "wild-cat" banking system yet ting-ling in the recollection of the older party leaders they have the nerve to pose as "coin doctors over a perfectly healthy currency, and once more fastening their ancient snags in that moth-eaten rag of money reform, begin to chew industriously, while the chronic agitator applauds raucously and yells "free silver;" but we who are looking in on the ground floor have discovered that, with all its alluring giltter, is the same old rag!

An old gentleman of my acquaintance relates that, when he went to get married he had a pocket full of "wild-cat" money. But when he reached the prospective bride's abode he discovered that his notes had so depreciated in value that he was unable to buy the license! Such is the handiwork of the folks who want to reform our currency! Verily, the cheek of the Democrat is fearfully and wonderfully constructed!

In his speech before the Ojai Valley McKinley Club, Judge Barnes punc-"De boy ain't gwine ter projeck wif de fiah w'en he done bu'n his hands."

m his speech before the Oal Valley McKinley Club, Judge Barnes punctured the free-silver theory beyond repair.

"If," said he, "the United States government can stamp 53 cents worth of sliver and make it a dollar, why stop at that? Why not create a dollar from 10 cents worth of sliver? Indeed, why should we stop at that, even? Could not the government stamp 50 cents worth of gold and call it a dollar? That would increase the circulation!"

Of a truth, friend Barnes, that was a "rib-roaster." To continue the Judge's logic, why use gold and sliver at all? Let us maks money of iron, as advocated by the illustrious European so long ago, when a farmer loaded up his log-wagon with money and went forth to buy a cow!

Welcome the day when we can gather up all our old scrap-iron and convert it into curency! For, if a government can create sound money by merely placing a fictitious value upon some substance, why let us in the name of reason cut up all our cld harness-leather, stamp it with the head of the Goddess of Liberty and start into circulation bearing the appropriate legend. "In God we trust!" Then, if it falls to be received by the astonished exchanges of our over-cautious sister nations, we can yet be consoled by the reflection that we are at least rolling in wealth—yea, money to burn!

Yea, fellow-Democrats, we are wise beyond our years! Solomon was a fool to us!

If the assessors in the various cities and counties would only do their sworn duty, there would be much less complaint about the accumulation of wealth, and if the voters would do their duty, men would be elected as assessors who would do theirs. So it comes round once more to the same old story, that the voters are themselves to blame for this, as for other evils of which they complain in this country, where the vote of the day laborer equals that of the millionaire at the polls.

MR. BRYAN IN NEW YORK.

Young Mr. Bryan has cut a rather wide swath, so to speak, in the great and sinful city of Gotham. The telegraph has told the story in graphic and sympathetic language, which relieves the imagination of a great strain and sets forth the picturesque figure of Mr. Bryan in a befitting manner as one of the truly great. We were told, in the earlier dispatches, that his arrival in New York was "an event, both in his career and in the general canvass for the Presidency, of no small moment." The sequel has more than proved this statement to have been true. The only real wonder is that the eastern side of the continent did not tip up as Mr. Bryan approached it. No event of that sort, however, seems to have occurred; or at least, if it did, the telegraph failed to report it, which is hardly supposable, as all the minute details of Mr. Bryan's stay in New York have, seemingly, been faithfully recorded. The Associated Press never "gets left."

We are informed that Mr. Bryan's arrival in New York, although an ordeal such as would make nervous the average man, did not have that effect upon him. This, of course, is proof Should any person be unable to secure copies when desired, he is urgently requested to advise this average man. "Bryan stepped from the train," say the dispatch, "and grasped the hand of Senator Jones. His greeting showed not an iota of nervousness or fear, but rather a tinge of bravery in facing the ordeal, or a gladness at being among those with whom he could discuss and argue the great issues of the campaign." must be regarded as extremely remarkable, under the circumstances, that Mr. Bryan grasped the hand of suggestions, by means of which the Senator Jones, insteading of seizing above named, while awaiting the arrival of their distinguished chief, were quietly enjoying a crow-lunch. The evidence that they were eating it at least, seems to be clear, though it is not so clear that they enjoyed the meal, which is one that always gives just caws for complaint. They were probably practicing up in anticipation of the far more bounteous crow-banquet of which they will be called upon to partake later on.

The costume in which Mr. Bryan arrived at the metropolis is concisely but graphically described as consisting of "a black alpaca coat and a silver-colored Alpine hat." It "goes without saving" that this costume was decidedly breezy; but, when it is remembered that the weather in New York, on the day in question, was extremely sultry. Mr. Bryan's taste in selecting so light a garb for the "ordeal" can not be fairly questioned. Still, it will probably not be advisable for him to adopt so primitive a costume for his forthcoming grand tour of the country, as it might at times prove embarrassing, and would certainly prove uncomfortable in some parts of the country when the frosty breezes of October begin to circulate at a ratio of 16 to 1. Mr. Bryan's silver-colored Alpine hat and black alpaca coat may be picturesque enough in themselves; but he can't win on the Li Hung Chang sult in this campaign. The Amerian voters are peut on wresting his yellow jacket and three-eyed peacock's feather from Mr. Bryan with more or less abruptness on the third day of November, Anno Domini, 1896.

CATTLE AND HIGH TARIFF.

If there is any one class of men who have good reason to like the candidacy of McKinley and to labor hard to insure his election, it is the breed ers of beef cattle. America consumes more beef, per capita, then any other civilized nation of the earth. land consumes mutton in about equal proportions to beef, while in Australia and New Zealand, the use of mutton as food exceeds that of the bovine product. In the Atlantic States the consumption of fish is much larger than in the Mississippi Valley States, especially in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Maine, all of which support a large fishing population. In the South, pork ranks even above beef as an article of food; and the same is true in Kansas, Nebraska, Illinois and Indiana. while in Ohio and Pennsylvania, the two meats are used in about equal

In California beef is used more than pork, while mutton ranks about third on the list. In Oregon, peopled originally by emigrants from Illinois and Missouri, the consumption of pork is greater than that of beef, which is The question of the hour is protecnearly equaled by that of mutton. We hear many complaints of hard times from the cattlemen, and yet they are the hardest men in the world to convince that the present Wilson tariff has had anything to do with it. Let us now proceed to discuss the question on its merits. Under the old tariff law, prior to the period when the McKinley tariff bill went into effect, there was a tariff on beef cattle, but not sufficient to prevent large importations from Mexico, Canada and the northeastern British provinces. For the four years prior to the McKinley tariff going into force, the importations were as fol-

It was in 1890 that the McKinley tariff became a portion of the law of the land. By its terms a specific duty of $10 per head was imposed upon any gardless of the country whence they were imported. A noticeable effect was the almost instantaneous decrease of importations in that line. For the fiscal years given below, ending on the 30th day of June in each year, the cattle importations reached the follow-

Difference in favor of McKinley Bill ...... 198,39
In 1894 the passage of the Wilson tariff bill repealed the McKinley act and imposed a tax of 20 per cent. ad valorem on all cattle over old. So far as Canada and other British possessions are concerned, it made but little difference, but on cattle imported from Mexico, it entailed a serious loss. A drover can go across the line into Mexico and buy beef cat tle from $6 to $10 per head, payable in Mexican dollars, which can be purchased at 50 per cent. of their face value with American money. Now see how soon the beef-growers of Idaho Montana, Oregon, New Mexico and Arizona began to feel the effect of what Mr. Huntington, of Santa Monica notoriety, would call "unwholesome competition." On the 27th day of August, 1894, the onstrosity known as the Wilson Gorman tariff went into effect: and be tween that time and the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1895, the importations of cattle from Mexico into the United States were 134,825 head. From that date up to May 31, 1896, they had reached a total of 211,242 for eleven months only, which is at the rate of 230,425 for the entire year. This is an actual excess of 15,954 head in eleven months, over the period of four years antedating the effect of the McKinley bill; and 214,348 more than the number

These men ought to know that cattle grow and thrive in many localities where silver is never found; that cattlemen are liberal circulators of coin of the realm; and that there will be good pasturage on a thousand hills in our Territories and new States long after every silver mine shall have been worked out, With all these facts so plainly before their eyes, can the cattle-breeders of Arizona, New Mexico and Southern California, as well as the farmers who have hay and corn to sell and pasture fields to rent, say that the McKinley tariff benefits only the trusts and combines of rich men? Among social questions that have been widely discussed of late in the press, is that of the permissibility or otherwise, under certain circumstances of suicide. A new phase of this subject was brought up in Oakland a fev days ago, when Rev. Dr. Wendte, president of the Alameda County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty, made a strong argument from his pulpit for the disposal by a humane death of lepers and all who may be afflicted with incurable dieases, or fatally injured in accidents. He thinks the responsibility in such cases should not be vested in any individual, but in the State, and cited the following French experience, which bears on the subject:

"Twenty-five years or more ago an engineer of eminence in France, af-flicted with a terrible inherited disease, of which he had seen his own father perish under aggravated tortures, took his own life. In his will he explained the motive of his deed and left to the French government a large bequest for the establishment of a commission on euthanasia. It was to consist of a sentatives of the government. To this tribunal was to be submitted any petition for examination and release which might be submitted by the incurably diseased and indorsed by their familie If they were found incapable of recov ery and sure to endure great and need less agony, the commission was to be empowered to gently and humanely put them out of suffering and give them a release into a better worl The French government, largely in-fluenced, it was claimed, by clerical counsels, declined to accept the trust. "In this, I believe, it did wrong. Though I appreciate the difficulties at-tending the matter, and what special danger to society it may seem to carry with it, I yet believe that the time is rapidly approaching when under proper safeguards euthanasia will be con-sidered eminently wise, humane and Christian." This somewhat startling suggestion will undoubtedly provoke a spirited controversy. It does certainly seem that we should be as humane to human beings as we are to suffering horses and dogs, under similar circumstances

There are no more interesting subjects than statistics. They show that since 1870 the population of the world has increased 12 per cent., wheat ha increased in production 321/2 per cent., wool 107% per cent., cotton 112% per cent., gold 39 per cent., and silver 289% per cent. These figures are well worth a few moments' consideration of

News comes from San Francisco of movement that will undoubtedly be "viewed with alarm" by Popocratic

For many years San Francisco has been noted throughout the world for the bounteous spreads made by the principal saloons at noon every day, in the shape of free lunch, that is to say, a meal that is furnished free of charge to patrons who purchase at the opposite counter a drink or cigars at a cost of 15 cents (or two for a quarter.) Originally the lunch was a snack of something cold, but the press of competition has gradually forced the pace until now a number of the establishments serve up to their customers every day a meal of a dozen courses, including such luxuries as mock turtle soup, pompano, goose breast, strawberry short cake, and so forth, until the saloon-keepers see bankruptcy staring them in the face. Each of them is, of course, averse to take the initiative in giving up the practice, and thus incur the wrath of their patrons, so they have hit upon the idea of asking the city government to forbid the serving of solid refreshments in saloons, after the fashion of the Raines law, in New York.

Our Popocratic brethren will doubtless recognize in this movement another insidious attempt to crucify the "common people." It is easy to see that if the great army of decayed "colonels" and "majors" and "judges," who in San Francisco depend mainly or the free lunch for an existence, are de prived of this means of sustenance they will be forced to work for a living and thus still further depress the already overcrowded labor market.

If it is possible yet to do such a thing, a supplemental plank, demanding free lunch, should be added to the Popocratic platform. Otherwise, it necessary to organiz independent party, having for its basis a clear-cut resolution in favor of free lunch, not at 16, but at 15 cents for one (or two for a quarter.)

Never, perhaps, even in their best days, did Keppler or Nast do anything better in the way of political cartoons than the double-page one by Hamilton in last week's Judge. It is entitled "The Assassin." It depicts Columbia lying prostrate at the foot of the steps of the National Treasury, where she has been done to death at the hands of an Anarchist assassin. He is looking down at his victim, while holding in his hand a short sword bearing the inscription "Re pudiation," by the aid of which he has accomplished his devilish work. Large in stature, swarthy in hue, and clad in a befitting vesture of rags, there is in the face of the assassin that look of sullen, savage, relentless villainy which is the indelible stamp on every patch contains a most interesting feature in the form of a fac-simile of a hitherto unpublished letter written by George Washington. The letter is dated March 28, 1790, addressed to Dr David Stuart, and is devoted to a consideration of the sectional differences which were then occupying the at tention of the people. He takes occasion in the letter to gently rebuke Madison for the prejudices which the latter had manifested against capitalists in the matter of funding the State debts. It may be mentioned, incidentally, that Congress passed the measure and that it was approved by Washington. The letter is in the posses sion of Alexander Crawford Chenowith of Maryland, a descendant of Charles Calvert, third Lord Baltimore. He recently discovered it when looking over some old family documents.

Mrs. Bryan declares that the Popocratic national headquarters shall be at Chicago, and so to Chicago they must go. Mrs. Bryan's choice is appropriate, not to say symbolical. From the Windy City, if from anywhere, should come the direction of the Popocratic ampaign. That city is a seething maelstrom of anarchism, socialism, discontent, and general cussedness. Mrs. Bryan has indeed chosen well. The members of the City Council

In conception, as also in detail, it is altogether one of the strongest bits of political cartoon work of the campaign.

Debate of Finance.

Debate of Finance.

A joint debate on the financial question will occur in the Y.M.C.A. auditorium next Saturday evening, August 22, at 7:30 o'clock. The Jefferson Club of Santa Ana will uphold the financial policy of the Republican party and the Progressive Literary Lyceum of this city that of the Democrats. Messrs. Watt, Hunt and Nourse, Jr., will represent the Santa Ana Club, while Messrs. Hilliker, Huribut and Johnson of the Progressive will endeavor to point out errors in the arguments of their neighbors. The Jefferson Club will attend in a body. The affair is expected to be one of interest. The lyceums invite all interested in the question to be present, as seats are free.

Now that Mrs. Bryan has decided where she wants her hubby's Popo-cratical headquarters located, and has specified that warm and humid spot or earth called Chicago as the identical place, there would seem to be no rea-son why the battle should not begin. The news sent broadcast over the land that Mrs. Bryan is the real, Simon-pure chairman of the Popo-cratic National Committee, instead of one Jones, the Arkansaw traveler, should flood with joy the swelling bosoms of the woman suffragers, who yearn to see the sex clamber to the front and take a strong hand in running the affairs of state.

For their hour seems at last to have arrived, been registered and been assigned a front room on the first floor, which contains all modern convenrworsts.

A petition in insolvency was filed in on them by tyrant man is in the sidesaddle.

Jones, the great and only Jones of Arkansaw, has been sidetracked and Mrs. Bryan, who knows what she wants and is not a bit backward about demanding it, has grabbed the reins from his hands and is going to put the Populistic nag, "Billy," into a Chi-from his hands and is going to put the Populistic nag, "Billy," into a Chicago livery stable.

Now, woman is to have a chance, and we shall see what we shall see. Under the firm hand of woman we shall probably witness a campaign carried on in a way to win things right and left, down the outside and up the middle.

Billy, the husband, may make the speeches, but the other end of the family is going to organize the marchers and mingle where the fireworks fizz and the torches smell, to heaven.

And Jones will be so pleased!

Just fancy, will you, with what joy Jones heard that Mrs. Bryan had decided to locate her hubby's headquarters, at Chicago, and, presumably, that she will from now out relieve the aforesaid Jones from having very much else to say about how the aforesaid hubby's campaign shall be conducted. Think how relieved Jones must have felt when he learned that Mrs. Bryan had decided where she wanted the headquarters, for man is always overfelt when he learned that Mrs. Bryan had decided where she wanted the headquarters, for man is always overfelt when he learned that Mrs. Bryan had decided where she wanted the headquarters, for man is always overfelt when he learned that Mrs. Bryan had bein him out; and few persons realize how happy Jones of Arkansaw is this minute. It would be worth going miles to see Jones exuding joy from every pore and smilling broad and beamful smiles at being relieved from duty. Who, who, indeed, and again who would not, like to be in Jones's place?

The Eagle grieves to note evidences.

The Eagle grieves to note evidences occasionally that the Popocrats and Populists who are, according to their say, the only regularly-enrolled and duly-accredited patriots in this country, at times lose sight of the foundation stone of their parties—plump and pure patriotism—and act as if they wanted office.

patriotism—and act as if they wanted office.

Even Tom Watson, one of the plumpest and purest patriots there is going, is clamorous that old Mr. Sewall should get off the ticket and the earth simultaneously, and make room for Tom.

And Mr. Sewall, the plump and pure patriot from the land where they pry the sun up, is exhibiting evidence that this would be a land that is fairer than day if Tom Watson would cease breathing its atmosphere. But outside these great and glorlous double tails to a ticket, all up and down the land, wherever Popocrat or Populist gets himself together in convention assembled, there are more kinds of fights going on for the loaves and fishes than the Associated Press and a great army of special correspondents on the spot can keep track of.

This is a source of great sadness to correspondents on the spot can keep track of.

This is a source of great sadness to the Eagle people who have heretofore looked upon the Populists in particular as being a little saltier than the very salt of the earth; as patriots plump, pure, simple and undefiled; as hungerers, not for place or pelf or public pifer, but for the salvation of the country on the basis of 16 of something to 1 of something else.

the basis of 16 of something to 1 of something else.

And thus is another idol knocked from its pedestal and smashed to smitherens. Thus is a fond hope blasted and goldarned. Thus are the Eagle folks outraged in one of the choicest spots of their too confiding natures.

Wee! woe! woe! Only to see Populists wrangling for places on the ticket; patriotism and country-saving lost sight of in the scramble for soft jobs; everything allowed to go hell-bent to destruction unless they can get their share of "them offices."

Who would have thought it? Who would have dreamed that the plump and pure patriots who have been posing as statesmen for the State's sake, are simply but statesmen for revenue only, like the many other pushing patriots who have gone before. Oh, but this is tough on us Eagles.

This question of fusion is one that has torn up the country in campaigns gone by and it is one that will probably end in con-fusion, as on divers and sundry previous occasions.

When there are so many patriots out of jobs, and so few places to fill with them, any sort of a fusion scheme that the mind of man can devise is likely to strike a large and lusty snag.

An army in which everybody wants an office is about as bad off as an army in which all are generals. Unless you can have a few privates who are satisfied to stand guard, police camp and curry the horses, there is going to be trouble.

So far as my observation goes, the Populistic army this year seems to see a chance to get its feet into the trough some place, and if it isn't given a show some place, and if it isn't given a snow somewhere in the trough's neighborhood, there will be more kinds of riot than there was in the last St. Louis convention. And while the pulling and hauling and howling is going on, one William McKinley of Ohio is going to get enough votes to land him in the Presidency, with plenty of States to spare.

About the funniest feature of this very funny campaign of false issues, financial heresies and cross-of-gold balderdash, is the funny fight of Sewall and Watson for an office which, if a man once gets it, he drops out of sight as effectually as one of those mysterious disappearances we read about in the newspapers. The man who wishes to readicate himself should run for the Vice-Presidency and get elected. It would probably be little loss to have either of the Popocratic tail-enders eradicated, but why they should fight for the privilege of being lost in the public shuffle is too much for THE EAGLE.

OFFICE OF THE TIMES, Los Angeles, Aug. 15, 1896. AN EASIER FEELING. As stated in The Times of yesterday, the feeling in local financial circles is much more confident than it was a week or ten days ago, when there was some prospect that unreasoning individuals might precipitate an altogether unnecessary and uncalled-for flurry in the money market, much after the fnanner in which a half dozen excit-able steers will sometimes stampede thousands of heads of cattle, who rush thousands of heads of cattle, who rush on blindly, not knowing what they are running for until they find themselves heaped together at the bottom of a ravine, and in bovine language ask each other, "Where are we at?"

The Investor, in an article on the attitude of the savings banks, has the following to say in regard to the local situation:

situation:

"A certain duliness pervades local banking circles, and there is a definite feeling that no activity in the money market need be expected until the result of the November elections has been ascertained. If there has been any danger of a general excitement among depositors it has evidently quieted down. We know of several cases where depositors have gone to certain of the savings banks with the full intention of drawing out their money, and on finding that they could get it at once, in gold coin, have reconsidered their determination and have left their funds were they were. Some of the savings banks are exacting the legal notice for withdrawal of deposits, but there has been no general agreement to that effect and each bank is governed by its own idea of what is best to be done for the benefit of its customers and its own self-protection." "A certain duliness pervades local

WHY 16 TO 1? The question may be asked of the free-silver advocates why they should insist upon the particular ratio of 16 to 1, to which they adhere as a sort of financial gospel. If 16 to 1 means anything, it should mean that gold is worth 16 times as much as sil-ver of the same weight, but as we all know such is not the case at present, the market price being almost twice 16 to 1. If the United States can make relative value of the two coins 16, then it could also make it 8 to 1, which, according to the free-silver do trine, should give us prosperity in still larger chunks.
It looks as if the silver men had been altogether too moderate in their de-mands—that is to say, if their theory is correct, which it is not.

SHIPPING FRUIT TO EUROPE. Commenting upon a paragraph in The Times giving the statement of a fruit expert to the effect that the exportation of California fruit to England is a most risky undertaking, and that more money has been lost than made in it, an official of the California Fruit Trans-money has been lost than made in it, an official of the California Fruit Transportation Company writes from Sacramento to take exception to the statement quoted. This official says that London shipments have been all right this year, and that the parties who have made them are more than pleased, one of them having netted more per box of twenty-five pounds of pears in London than a Northern California grower received for fifty pounds of fancy pears in New York on the same day. The correspondent says further:

"The Earl Fruit Company furnished fruit for two or three of the first trains this year, and for reasons best known to ourselves, they refused to comply with our requirements, and their place in each special train has been taken by prominent growers and shippers in this section. Since the Earl Fruit Company ceased shipping to London they have taken every occasion to injure the success of these shipments, but they have utterly failed. These people are the only nones, so far as I know, who are opposed to London shipments, and are the only people who are giving the so-called good advice to growers to not ship to London has been most successful and position we have gone on and each sale in London has been most successful and has shown a good profit to the growers." It is doubtless true that many of the It is doubtless true that many of the failures made in shipping fresh fruit from California to London have been due to mistakes in packing, or in properly grading the fruit, on which subjects London buyers are very particular. There is a market of vast extent in England for fine fruit in good condition, but it is exceedingly unwise and unprofitable to risk the great expense of shipping any but the finest grades to so great a distance.

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS.

HOW TO DEVISE PROPERTY W

me time ago I noticed where an estate had gone through Probate Court etc. There had been about $20,000, and when it was all settled, if I remember rightly, a balance of 20 cents was handed over. And today I noticed an estate in San Bernardino cents was handed over. And today I noticed an estate in San Bernardino was administered upon and there was scarcely enough to go around.

"Now, I am an old man, and am deeply concerned about the welfare of my children. Can you tell us through your paper how we may fix our little property so that it may not have to go through the hands of the Cormorants that are watching for us to pass away? I have talked with my neighbors about it, but we are all in the dark. Be kind enough to answer."

There are two safe methods by which an estate may be secured to the heirs or assigns of a person without its passing out of his hands before death. First, an olographic will, An olographic will is one that is entirely written out and signed by the testator himself. It is subject to no other form, and may be made in or out of the State, and need not be witnessed. Any amount of property may be disposed of by it. (See California Civil Code, see, 1277.) Lawyers admit that this is the safest form of will that can be devised. It must be in handwriting, not in typewriter, and as above stated, there must be absolutely nothing in it that is not in the handwriting of the person making the will.

following is an approved form of h a will:

1. John Smith, hereby make my last

1. I give all the property of which I possessed to my wife, Mary Smith.

1 give her power to sell all or any of estate, without any order of court.

"I give her power to sell all or any of my estate, without any order of court, and I revoke all the wills by me heretofore made.

"I declare that this will is entirely written, dated and signed by my hand.

The second way is to make out a deed of the property to be devised and place It din escrow with a bank or other responsible financial institution, to be delivered to the parties interested upon the death of the person who makes the deed.

INCORPORATIONS. The Pasadena and Mount Wilson Toll-road Company has filed a certificate of increase of capital stock from $50,000 to $200,000. Pasadena is the principal place of business. William Morgan is chairman and William Staats, secretary.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Today's stock market was dull and professional and prices narrow and irregular. with one or two exceptions. Lower London prices and profit-taking caused declines at the opening, but full recoveries occurred later under the leadership of Sugar and Manhattan. The only influence of a specific character was the bank statement which had been anticipated unfavorably. It showed a loss of $4,415,400 in reserve, bringing the surplus of that item above the legal limit down to $9,400.175, and a falling off in deposits of $9,770,800. The exhibit induced moderate selling, but at the low points covering by shorts stimulated, and lower rates for money which was offered in large sums at 1 per cent.. started anew the upward movement. The extreme fluctuations did not exceed fractions, with the exception of Sugar and Manhattan. which moved within a range of 1½ and 1 per cent.' respectively. The closing was firm at the rally with the net changes trivial. While the influences bearing upon the market of the week were in only one or two instances new, and were of varying importance, there was a decidedly more cheerful sentiment regarding the immediate outlook. London was a buillish factor, and support that had long been lacking was again offered by insiders in most properties. A reappearance of commission-house buying was halled with satisfaction by the owners and holders of securities, and at intervals the bears who had been flushed with their successes in depressing prices encountered adroit and aggressive manipulation by large representative banking intersets, and were signally defeated. A feature was the execution of reinvestment orders in some of the high-priced stocks and bonds. Trading at the outset was characterized by decided weakness. The lowest prices in the recent movement was roorded in a number of stocks. The bond market today was depressed on light offerings. The week's market showed decided strength on a subsidence of liquidation, and purchases by local

New York Banks.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The New York Financier says this week the total cash holdings of the New York clearing-house banks according to the statement for the week ending August 15, 1896, are $125,248,400. Of this amount nine banks alone hold $53,085,000, or over 45 per cent. In view of this condition it is not surprising that there is a continued tendency to call in loans as some of the institutions are below the legal reserve and the demand for funds from the interior is not diminished. The excess reserve of the clearing-house banks is lower than it has been for over two years, but when it is recalled that during the corresponding week three years ago the banks were $12,-045,800 under their legal requirements, their immeasurably superior standing at present will be better understood. The decrease in loans probably reflects the liquidation action enforced through the necessityy of replenishing reserve and the loss in cash represents the heavy demand on the banks from the interior which has been a factor in the situation for several weeks past. There seems to be no probability that the statement next week will show results much different from those of the current week.

SOLDIERS' HOME.

of a Veteran with a History

Distinguished Visitors. SOLDIERS' HOME, Aug. 15.—(Regular Correspondence.) John Whalen late Co. K. Second United States Artillery, Mexican war, who died Friday, had quite a remarkable history. He frequently told of his experiences in the Mexican campaign, and said he was present at the surrender of Gen. Santa Ana. Whalen came West in 1849 and mined at numerous places near the Canadian line. In the Mexican war he was the cannoneer of a light battery, and it is said the captain of his company afterward became a secessionist in the civil war. Whalen was an odd character, and to a certain extent incorrigible.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS. Gov. Rowland received a telegram today announcing that Gen. John C.

today announcing that Gen. John C. Breckinridge, Inspector-General, U.S. A., will arrive here this evening on his annual inspection visit. The several companies will probably be ordered out for inspection.

Accompanying Gen. Breckinridge is his secretary, Maj. Thomas T. Kent. Mai. Kent was present at the asassination of Abraham Lincoln, and was one of the first to enter the President's box after the fatal shot was fired. He helped to find the bullet hole, and has in his possession a knife which he then had, and which he lent for the purpose of cutting open the President's clothes.

THE DEATH ROLL.

THE DEATH ROLL. Besides John Whalen, above mentioned, the recent deaths at the home include the following:
John Whalen, late Co. A, Ninety-sixth, New York Infantry, admitted from Bakersfield June, 1895; aged 56.

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY. Los Angeles Boy Arrested for

SAN BERNARDINO, Aug. 15.—(Reg-ular Correspondence.) It seems that the person arrested for firing the timber about Squirrel Inn is a boy but 14 years old, who says he is from Los Angeles and that his name is George Young. His father lives in Los Angeles and his mother is dead. His motive seems to have been revenge on Max Erkes for a fancied wrong. It is not yet decided whether to prosecute him under the State or Federal law.

Where Men Are Weak

In the small of the back, the general nerve muscular and sexual center—the point at which the nerves, which feed nearly all the vital functions of the body, begin—this is where nearly all men and women are weak. A pain here may mean, and generally does, the exhaustion of nerve strength in the vial organs. It is the nerves crying for aid, and no pain at this point should be passed as immaterial. It will come again, and with greater severity, and if the message given by the nerves is not attended to it may result in general nervous prostration, impotency or Bright's disease of the kidneys.

Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt.

Whatever the cause of these pains in the back they are nerve pains. They mean that the nerves are suffering, and a remedy which will cure the nerves will remove the cause of the pain. As electricity is the life of the nerves, it is the only remedy that will cure them. This explains the wonderful and exclusive success of Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt. Its full strength, and it gives a volume of electricity into the body, which saturates the system in three hours, is directed to the small of the back, where it enrected to the small of the back, where it enters the nerve centers and feeds them.

Three in One Family Cured.

"Dr. A. T. Sanden—Dear Sir: Out of pure rratitude I write the following: I got hurt last November by a heavy warehouse door falling on my head and jarring my back and kidneys. I was under the doctor's care for nearly three weeks, but found very little relief. When I got your Belt I was not able to go to work, and could not bear anything to touch my back without great pain. I began to improve as soon as I started with your treatment, and now, after 4 months' use, I am a well man. My wife has been under the doctor's care for years. She used it for a month, and we believe she is doing better under your treatment than all others, and has not had occasion to visit a doctor since.

ers, and has not had occasion to visit a doctor since.
"My sister-in-law, Mrs. E. J. Bigham, of Woodville, Tulare county, came to pay my wife a visit. She was so ill that she was hardly able to sit up. I got her to try the Belt and she has been helped very much. That is the reason I send for a Belt for her. I am perfectly willing to verify this letter, and hope that it may be the means of doing others a great deal of good. Yours, gratefully,
"Hueneme, Ventura County, Cal."

Burglars Went Through Judge Magee's House-Plenty of Res-taurants in the Place-A Weekly Paper Revives—A Wife's Lin bilities.

PASADENA, Aug. 15.—(Regular Correspondence.) Nearly all of the street work undertaken by the city has been completed, and it is not probable that much more will be undertaken before the rains begin. The East Colorado street work, will, it is hoped, be put through before winter. Nothing defi-nite has been accomplished on the im-provement of the roadway on North Marengo avenue. By the 1st of September the work on South Los Robles will be completed, and it will greatly improve that portion of the city, and open up a new residence section. Summit avenue is now completed, and is a fine piece of work. The Terrace Drive improvement proposed to the Council is in statu quo, and nothing SHOT BY A BURGLAR. N. Waller, bookkeeper for the khoff-Cuzner Lumber Company, Kerckhoff-Cuzner Lumber Company, was shot by a burglar at 11:05 e'clock tonight. The wounds, though painful, are not necessarily dangerous. Mr. Waller was returning to his home at No. 144 North Peoria street a little later than usual, and instead of going his usual way he cut "across lots." As he reached the rear of his home he saw a man standing in the shadow of the house, and asked: "What are you doing here?" For reply the stranger drew a revolver and fired three shots at Mr. Waller, and then fied, Two of the bullets took effect in Mr. Waller's left leg, just above the knee.

The police were notified at once, but there was no clew to aid in catching the fellow, who is probably a member of the gang of burglars now systematically looting houses in this city. A short time previous to the shooting Mrs. Waller heard a noise near the house, but supposed it to be caused by cats or dogs, and it is evident the stranger was trying to effect an entrance to the house.

Entrance was gained from the rear of the house by prying open a window, and bureaus, trunks and receptacles of all sorts were evidently examined. A small amount of silver money and a gold pen were the only booty taken away by the thieves, as the valuables had been removed to the bank by Judge Magee before his departure. The matter was not reported to the police.

The Free Lance came out today, and makes a statement of its recent financial difficulties, placing the onus thereof on one George W. Frame, who was associated with Mr. Vail in the publication of the paper. Mr. Vail says that Mr. Frame agreed to pay all bills until the paper was placed upon a paying basis, and that it was demonstrated very speedily that the gentleman referred to had not the wherewithal, and that hereafter the paper will be conducted under a different management. The Free Lance also says emphatically that it is not dead, so far as it knows itself.

The briefs filed in the case of Habbick against Livingstonein Judge Merriam's court present some points of law that have not been passed upon by the legal authorities, and hence have not been decided by the Judge. The most important of these refer to the liabilities of the wife to pay debts contracted by her husbamd, when she has property and he has none. Mr. Livingstone is 38 years of age and infirm, and the suit was to collect a board bill from his wife, with whom he is at present not living.

Hon, O. Z. Hubbell will be greeted by a large audience next Thursday evening. The Republican cause is gaining new advocates every day in Ontario, and McKinley buttons are the only ones seen upon the streets.

Miss Maude Willis, dean of the College of Elocution, U.S.C., gave a recital in the Methodist Episcopal Church last evening. The entertainment was very meritorious, but the audience was small.

very meritorious, but the audience was ornall.

The methods pursued by the silver men in the formation of the Ontario Free Silver Club are being severely criticised. The president, who was elected, does not intend to vote for Bryan, and at least one of the vice-presidents is not in sympathy with the free-silver cause, and was not at the meeting. A large number of citizens whose names appear upon the membership roll, were not at the meeting, and did, not authorize the use of a their names in connection with a free silver club. It seems to have been an attempt to get a large number of names, regardless of the methods used.

It is estimated that nearly two nundred Ontarions are rusticating at Long Reach. This resort is the favorite one with our people, though Ontario is well represented at the other resorts.

many ejectric roads in sight today as there were some time ago. The mules have a new lease of life and are no longer figuring on a trip to the mountains. The Consolidated Electric is going right ahead just the same as ever and the mules are going ahead, too. Mr. Diver got tired waiting for orders to proceed, and today he filled up the holes which he had dug some time ago for trolley poles. Some of our people are a little curious to know how mules and little curious to know how mules and electricity will work over the same road, but these may be the two opposites necessary to complete the circuit and strike a pace suitable for Santa Bar-bara. Street sprinkling with sea water was commenced yesterday, but the plan of direct suction is not likely to prove satisfactory. A reservoir in the upper part of town for the reception of salt water is the next essential.

The Sunset Telephone and Telegraph people have had a crew of linemen at work in Pomona for several days putting in a new system, or rather remodeling the old one so that a kind of return-ground circuit is made in each instance. It is claimed it will be quite an improvement.

Pomona now runs a regular line of heavy freight teams between this point and Los Angeles, the teamsters, as a rule, managing to get a load of some kind both ways.

There never has, in the history of Pomona, been a summer heretofore that has witnessed such a large and continued exodus. At one time it was claimed by conservative persons on the ground, that at least 560 Pomona people were quartered at Long Beach alone, to say nothing of the numbers at other seaside and mountain resorts. Of the latter, San Antonio Cañon is the favorite, but quite a respectable number yisit Bear Valley and Strawbery Valley.

A number of the leading Populists in the northern part of this county, after mature reflection, regard the free-silver

The issue here is "Money," with all of its important bearings. The silver Democrats forced this title upon the local campaign by their misinterpretation of the fineacial viewled the Texture

BUILDING AND BOAT.

W. L. Newton is building a new sloop yacht, converting the backyard at his photo gallery on Upper Main street into a naval yard for that special purpose. Mr. Newton has put in his spare time executing the plans and designs which he has had in his head and on paper for a long time, and by Christmas next he expects to be sole owner of the neatest little craft that sails in the channel waters. Mr. Ellison is now putting on the planking. The little vessel will be thirty-seven feet four inches over all, with a ten-foot six-inch beam, and a draft of four feet eight inches. She is built entirely of oak and brass, with displacement of eight and a half tons, carrying about 1000 pounds outside. She will have a sail area of 602 feet, with 15 feet hoist, 14 feet gaff, 25 feet boom, and will carry two fibs of 81 feet each. Her bowsprit outboard is 10 feet and she will have a low, 12-inch trunk cabin. She is designed, as her builder says, expressly for going out and having a good time, and will cruise from Point Conception down the southern coast. She will be christened Olita, which means in English, Whitecap. W. L. Newton is building a new sloop

CHARGED WITH ABDUCTION. SANTA BARBARA, Aug. 15.—Dan Martin and Pete Storni arrested Frank Miller and Hattie Eber day before yesterday, and charged Miller with abduction. The couple were stopping in a dive on Lower State street. Miss Eber's mother came up from Los Angeles last night, bringing a letter from Republican party.

At the preliminary trial today it was brought out that this is the self-same Frank Miller who shot and killed a socaled robber in a private residence in San Francisco over a year ago, and should be something and the street of the law.

SPANISH MARRIAGE FESTIVITIES AT SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO.

Grand Barbecue for the Guests Increased Registration in Or-ange County—The Total Foots Up Over Four Thousand—Night-

SANTA ANA, Aug. 15.-(Regular Correspondence.) A very pretty wed-ding occurred in the Cathedral at Los Angeles yesterday, in which Miss Nancy E. Oden of that city and Reginaldo O. Pryor of Capistrano were the high contracting parties. The cere-mony was performed by the Rev. Father McAuliffe in the presence of a large number of friends of the bride and groom.

The marriage bans were pronounced

The marriage bans were pronounced at 10 o'clock, after which the couple left for the groom's home in Capistrano, where the event was celebrated in a unique manner with a grand Spanish wedding feast. Almost the entire population of the mission town was at San Juan station, near the Pryor home, when the train bearing the wedding party arrived. Salutes were fired from a half dozen guns and pistols, and rice was showered after the young couple as a greeting of welcome.

The barbecue which immediately followed this demonstration had already been prepared, and was served to the throng of guests under an arbor which had been built especially for the occasion. Two long tables were loaded down with eatables cooked in good old Spanish style, and in every respect the feast was a royal affair. After the barbecue a grand ball was held in the hall at Capistrano, at which over thirty-five couples were present. The young couple were the recipients of many costly presents from their friends in various parts of Southern

As cession, how was it possible to decide which of the ebony beauties and their escorts were deserving of the prize. As the gay procession passed and repassed before the judges' stand the question became momentarily more perplexing. Judge Banning, resplendent in white satin skirt and shoes, with red satin waist, and broad-laced Vandyke collar, flowing over his graceful shoulders, with side-combs confining abundant wool, was one of the striking features of the promenade, and walked so gracefully that the judges were almost inclined to award him the prize, and would doubtless have done so had it not been for the awkardness of his partner.

Mrs. H. M. Sale, as Angeline, in whose honor the affair was given, wore a charming ebony face, surmounted by a wig of snowy wool resplendent with numerous brass ornaments and glass jewels, which sparkled like diamonds in the fittul glow of the coal oil lamps which illuminated the hall.

At length, after great consideration, the prize was awarded to Miss Olive Belle Clark and George S. Montgomery, for graceful deportment and striking and appropriate costumes. Some of the dusky belles, jealous of their companion's good fortune, were heard to insinuate that it was her old rose mosquito-net fichu and her gorgeous flowered bodice that captured the judges' fancy and misled their judgent. But it was generally conceded that the award was fairly made.

Banning Company. Only ladies and gentlemen will be admitted to the grand promenade, to contest for the enormous cake which the chef of the Metropole has been four days in preparing, and, which, it is said will be a perfect triumph of culinary art. This affair is given complimentary to Mrs. H. M. Sale, who for the past two weeks has been a leader in social affairs here. Burnt cork is in great demand and a panic was narrowly averted last night when it was announced that the island supply was running short. Reinforcements, however, will arrive on tonight's steamer.

Yesterday afternoon a delightful card party was given by Mmes. Alfred Salisbury, Richard Mercer and Albert Busch at Camp Buschbury, at the head of Crescent avenue. An immense awning had been stretched in front-of the cottage tent from which was festooned a fish net with beautiful flowers caught in the meshes, forming a most artistic and airy roof, beneath which the ladies gathered around the six tables provided for the afternoon's entertainment. Gay cushions, rugs and divans, added to the picturesque and luxury of the improvised drawing-room. The prizes were won by Mrs. C. C. Parker, Mrs. F. W.
